Pa. Pork Council Proposes National Moratorium To Suspend Sow House Construction

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Next Friday, March 5, a delegation of Pennsylvania Pork Producers Council (PPPC) representatives will submit a resolution to the National Pork Producers Council (NPPC) that, in effect, asks the USDA to order a suspension on construction of all new sow houses across the country.

According to PPPC President David Reinecker, a swine producer from York Springs, the resolution is a way of taking a "time out," he said, from what the industry identifies as an oversupply of hogs, which has sent the nationwide price of hogs plummeting to their lowest ever.

The resolution, proposed by the LanChester Pork Producers Council, was passed at the PPPC's board meeting Feb. 18. The resolution calls for a one-year moratorium on the construction of new sow units.

Brent Hershey, president of the LanChester Pork Producers Council, helped sponsor and voted for the resolution, which passed by a narrow margin. Of 19 present at the meeting, 10 voted for, nine against, the resolution.

The proposal, according to Hershey, passed because the industry is reeling from the lowest prices for hogs in the history of the country, he noted.

"Industry experts tell us there are more hogs than the capacity to kill the hogs," Hershey, president of Hershey Ag, Marietta, explained.

In addition, the U.S. government has made monies available to producers to help them ride out the current depressed prices.

About $80 million per year is coming from the government to take herds that are pseudorabies positive and render them. The meats are still usable, Hershey noted, but because of the flood of pork on the market, the meat is rendered.

"The supply and demand system is completely out of sync," Hershey said.

If the resolution, one of many put forward by representatives of 50 states at the National Pork Forum next week at the Opryland Hotel in Nashville, Tenn., a question arises: how will the moratorium be enforced?

According to PPPC President David Reinecker, the resolution asks U.S. Ag Secretary Dan Glickman to find a way to enforce it, but defines no clear way for him to do so.

The purpose of the resolution is to ask for a "time out," Reinecker said. "In one year, we have increased the supply of pork nationwide by 10 percent. No industry can grow when the commodity increases by that number of percent."

Reinecker noted that the resolution is pointed only at sow operations. It does not include new sow units that have been approved for construction or for which construction is already under way. It doesn't have anything to do with the construction of new weaning or finishing units.

The PPPC requested that Penn State Extension work to draw up the one-page resolution. The resolution was written by Bob Mikesell, senior extension associate, and Ken Kephart, Penn State swine specialist.

Pennsylvania's Dairy Producers Divided Over Compact

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The dairy industry in Pennsylvania is unequally divided over the need to join the Northeast Interstate Dairy Compact, according to testimony presented Tuesday during a hearing in the state Capitol.

The state House Agricultural and Rural Affairs Committee held a hearing Tuesday on proposed legislation that would enable Pennsylvania to join the Northeast Interstate Dairy Compact should the United States Congress authorize it prior to Oct. 1, 1999.

While no one testified to any problem with the actual wording of House Bill 170, which was the main issue before the Committee, the hearing exceeded its scheduled time because of discussions and opinions presented as to the effects, need, and wisdom of pursuing expansion of the Northeast Interstate Dairy Compact and including Pennsylvania.

Pro-Compact

Representatives of the state's largest and most influential agricultural policy organizations — the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau and the Pennsylvania State Grange — testified in support of joining the Compact.

Those organizations develop policy annually through local membership initiative and delegate voting, frequently referred to as a grassroots mechanism of policy development.

Arden Tewksbury, of Meshoppen, founder and president of the much smaller membership Pro-Ag organization, has been a known supporter of Pennsylvania joining the Compact. He said he already ships milk into the existing Compact states.

Robert Junk, president of the Pennsylvania Farmers Union, testified in support of joining the Compact.

Those two organizations have policy developed by leadership.

Representatives for two of the nation's largest dairy cooperatives — Land O' Lakes, and Dairy Farmers of America — said the cooperatives strongly support Pennsylvania joining the Compact.

Allen O'Hara, representing the Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Cooperative Association Inc., said the cooperative strongly encourages Pennsylvania joining the Compact. According to published reports, about half of the Md.-Va. Milk Producers membership is in Pennsylvania. Also, the Md.-Va. cooperative has announced it is entering into a merger with the 400-member Carolina Virginia Milk Producers Association with members to Georgia.

National Grain Market

St. Joseph, MO
Wed Feb 24, 1999

USDA-MO Dept Ag Market News
addition of So. Iowa

DAILY NATIONAL GRAIN SUMMARY

All commodities took a bad beating today and soybeans really got another whopping. Soybeans are 58 to 60 cents lower in the past twelve trading days. Today, wheat 2 to 12 cent lower. Corn 2 to 6 cents lower. Sorghum 11 to 12 cents lower. Soybeans 12 to 20 cents lower. Grain and soybean farmers have a right to feel like they have lost a big fight. Country elevator truck bids many places now have corn 1.85, soft wheat 1.75, and soybeans down around 4.00 per bushel. It is time to start buying high priced seed, fertilizers and other chemicals for Spring planting. The big tractors and combines are not getting any cheaper. Rent seems to go up every year. USDA is not painting a pretty picture down the road. US farm export projections are down 1.5 billion and nearly 10 percent below a year ago and 20 percent under 1996. The price spread between current cash market and harvest months on the Board spreading out but still no hedging room for producers. July soft winter wheat 2.64, hard wheat 2.95, November soybeans are 4.83 and December corn 2.36. Realistically, they are looking at LDPs and this could cost the Government some big bucks. Currently most county LDPs for soft winter wheat is around 50 cents with Texas averaging 75 cents. Hard red winter wheat LDPs averaging 17 to 19 cents in most states with Oklahoma 29 cents. Many soybean producing states currently have LDPs ranging from 75 to 85 cents. Corn holding up the best but with December cotton at 58 cents, this commodity could draw a lot of acres this spring.

USDA-OK Dept Ag Market News
Oklahoma National Stockyards - Weekly Cattle Summary

Compared to last week: Feeder, stocker, and steer calves weak to 2.00 lower. Feeder heifers 1.00-2.00 lower. Stocker heifers and heifer calves firm. Demand moderate for feeders; good for stockers and calves. All Conditions well below last week. Quality plain to average, few attractive. Feeders in medium to moderate flesh, some fleshy and not all flesh due to wheat. Weigh-ups gaunt to mostly average, several full. Calves in thin to medium flesh. Cattle on feed report caused concern and had some effect early in the sale but kind and condition of cattle were larger factor in downtrend. Slaughter cows and bulls steady. Packer demand moderate at best. Bulk of receipts bred cows or thin cows returning to the farm. Total of 500 cows and bulls sold with 30 percent going to packers. Receipts this week 14,900; last week 12,125; last year 17,147. Supply consisted of 76 percent yearlings over 600 lbs; 21 percent calves and short yearlings under 600 lbs; 3 percent cows and bulls. How Do You Improve On The Best?

In the case of Chore-Time's ULTRAFLO® Cage Feeder, you do it by beefing up the auger wire and extending the product warranty.

Chore-Time's new and improved ULTRAFLO® Cage Feeder uses our exclusive round-wire auger. It is nearly 10% heavier than our original ULTRAFLO®. And that means strength and years more running time for you! We're so confident of it that we've warranted the auger for twice* as long as the old model.

What's more, you still get all the features you valued in the original ULTRAFLO® Feeder. You can still count on unparalleled feed savings, economical operation, and ULTRAFLO's remixing action which eliminates feed separation.

Chore-Time's ULTRAFLO® Cage Feeder—contact us today for more information on how the best just got better!

*Chore-Time's New ULTRAFLO® Cage Feeder Auger has a 10-year prorated warranty

The OLD FARMER'S THIS WEEK WITH ALMANAC

MARCH 1-7, 1999

BOREAS BLUSTERS

How the wind blows, and the storm seems as if it would rend all before it! 'Tis trying times for old apple-trees, rickety sheds, and white-pine fences. Now we think of our friends upon the dashing waves! But, what "if the tempest top-gallant mast smack-smooth should smite, and shiver each splinter of wood!" Yet is there not a cherub aloft to keep watch for poor Jack? Indeed there is, and the same kind guardian looks out for the safety of the bewildered teamster, toiling midst snow and sleet upon the desert mountains. Blow on, old equinoctial, and "crack your cheeks!" – The Old Farmer's Almanac, 1855

Send me a little garden breeze / To gossip in magnolia trees. – Hervey Allen

TIP OF THE WEEK

☞ In choosing overcoats, look for one with a hood that extends well beyond your cheeks to better fend off the wind.

CHOCOLATE OATMEAL BARS

2 squares semisweet chocolate
1/3 cup butter
1/4 cup light corn syrup
2/3 cup sugar
1/2 teaspoon salt
1-1/2 teaspoons vanilla extract
2 cups instant oatmeal
1/4 cup chopped nuts

In a double boiler, melt together the first four ingredients. Add salt and vanilla, and then stir in oats and nuts. Press into an 8-inch square pan and bake at 425° F for 12 minutes. When cool, cut into bars.

Makes 16 bars

The OLD FARMER'S WEATHER PROVERBS

Every wind has its weather.

No weather is ill, when the winds are still.

If clouds fly to the west at sunrise, expect fine weather.

A screeching owl indicates cold or storm.

Handling Differences Productively

With the economic pressures on farmers, the opportunity for disagreement, and contention among farm family members and among employees on the farm is magnified. Gregory Billikopf, from the University California says such differences, when handled properly, can result in richer, more effective, creative solutions. But it is difficult to consistently turn differences into opportunities. When disagreement is poorly dealt with, a sense of psychological distance is forged between people.

When faced with challenges, we tend to review possible alternatives and come up with the best solution given the data at hand. Unwanted options are discarded. While some decisions may take careful consideration, analysis and even agony, we solve others almost instinctively. Our best solution becomes our position or stance in the matter. Our needs, concerns and fears all play a part in coming up with such a position. Misunderstanding and dissent grow their ugly heads when our solution is not the same as other people involved in the farming operation.

The panel on employee relations at the Pennsylvania Holstein Convention last week had some very good ideas. The proposed that you build up employees, not always look for complaints, and keep good relations with past employees. This kind of effort is good for any personal relationship.

Two principles have contributed so much to the productive handling of disagreements that it is difficult to read about the subject in popular or scholarly works without their mention. The first principle, "Seek first to understand, then to be understood," was introduced by Steven Covey, in Seven habits of Highly Effective People. If we encourage others to explain their side first, they will be more apt to listen to ours.

The second communication principle was introduced by roger Fisher, and William Ury in their seminal work, "Getting to Yes." Simply stated, it is that people in disagreement focus on their positions when instead they should focus on their needs. When we focus on our positions we underscore our disagreements, when we concentrate on needs, we find more common ground than we had assumed. When the needs of both sides are met, agreement can follow.

This aspect of farming is not about cows and plows. But it certainly contributes to the productivity of the farm when differences between people are handled effectively.

To Consider Drywall

Leftover wallboard could be pulverized and added to the soil to help improve the soil. Wallboard (drywall) is made from the mineral gypsum and paper. When pulverized and spread, the gypsum in the drywall offers the same advantage as adding gypsum directly to the soil.

Each year the U S building industry creates over two million tons of scrap drywall. This represents about one per cent of the total landfill contents Using scrap drywall as a soil conditioner in crop production would save valuable landfill space The gypsum in the drywall is a good source of calcium and sulfur Gypsum is the most beneficial when added to high clay content soils that are low in calcium content Gypsum is also helpful on compacted soils

On soils that need calcium, drywall may be applied at the rate of 10 to 25 tons per acre according to one Ohio State study. Some construction companies are grinding the drywall and using it at the building site to improve soils For scrap drywall to be applied to soil, it should be clean, cut off waste from new construction Scrap from old demolished buildings should not be used because it could be contaminated with lead base paint or other hazardous material

To Inspect Corn Planter

We are starting to close in on corn planting time Is your corn planter ready for planting?

According to Robert Anderson, Lancaster County Extension Agronomy Agent, what your corn planter does or does not do will have a lot of bearing on the type of corn crop you will be harvesting in the fall Plant population is the single biggest factor in corn yields that a corn grower has control over A properly adjusted corn planter has 99 per cent effect on desired plant populations. Step one in getting the corn planter ready to plant is to read the owners manual

The second step is to go over every nut, bolt, spring, chain and everything else and replace all worn or broken parts After all worn or broken parts are replaced, it is time to start adjusting the planter

To Adjust Corn Planter

There are many important adjustments to be made to your corn planter, according to Robert Anderson, Lancaster County Extension Agronomy Agent. The goal of a properly adjusted corn planter is to drop the correct number of seeds, deposit them at the depth at which they will germinate and grow, place the proper amount of any fertilizer or insecticides applied with the planting operation, and then close the seed furrow

Penn State research shows that plant populations between 26,000 and 32,000 plants per acre will produce the most corn even in dry years Check to see what your seed dealer suggests Once all the adjustments are made, it is time to put some corn in the hoppers and check to see what happens First drop the seed on top of the ground to see how many seeds are dropped and how uniform the spacing is. If that checks out, put the planter into some prepared ground and see where the seed is placed.

Do not forget to continue to make these checks throughout the planting season Remember, if you do not plant it, it will not grow!

Feather Prof.'s Footnote: "You cannot reach your goals without occasionally taking some long shots."

❖ FARM FORUM ❖

Editor,

Several members of the Progressive Agriculture Organization (Pro-Ag) have been in Harrisburg, during the last two weeks passing out pertinent information concerning the Northeast Interstate Dairy Compact (Compact) to the members of the Pennsylvania Senate and House of Representatives.

The information passed out contained fact sheets relating to the Compact from the Northeast Dairy Compact Commission, Montpelier, Vermont. Also a letter was passed out from Pro-Ag illustrating why the Compact is needed.

Arden Tewsbury, manager of Pro-Ag said we also handed out information illustrating that during the last six months of 1997 there was 21 million pounds more of Class I (fluid) sales in the Compact area as compared to the last six months of 1996.

The Compact was not in exis-

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

THE WHOLE STORY
February 28, 1999

Background Scripture:
Titus 2:11-14;
Hebrews 12:18-29;
Revelation 1:17-20; 11:15-19
Devotional Reading:
I Peter 1:3-9

It seems I have known the story of "Pandora's Box" since early childhood — but not the whole story.

Pandora was the lovely bride sent to Epimetheus by Zeus. Pandora and Epimetheus lived happily together until one day Mercury brought them a beautiful golden casket for them to enjoy but with the specific instruction that it was not to be opened under any circumstances. Pandora, however, was as curious as she was lovely and, one day, while her husband was away, she pried open the box, just a little, but enough so that out flew a swarm of biting and stinging insects. She quickly closed it but it was too late. The insects even found and harassed Epimetheus and his friends. The poisons of the insect stings were suspicion, hatred, fear and malice. When Epimetheus returned home there was a bitter quarrel and Pandora was reduced to tears.

That is all I remembered of the story, but today I discovered the ending I had either never known or perhaps heard and forgot. While they were quarreling, the lovers heard from within the casket a sweet voice, calling: "Let me out! Let me soothe your pain." Fearfully, they opened the box and out flew a dazzling butterfly. As it lighted on the two lovers their pains were healed and they resumed their happy life together. The butterfly's name, you see, was Hope.

A GREATER HOPE

There are many tragic stories in the world but the healing power of hope is often the part of the story that is either unheard or unremembered. How tragic, for it is an essential element of life. "Man is based on hope," wrote Thomas Carlyle. "He has no other possession than hope." It has been demonstrated by medical researchers that hope — in the physician's skill, the medicine or therapy prescribed or in the providence of God — is a demonstrable ingredient in recovery from illness and injury.

As followers of Jesus Christ our hope, I believe, is even more powerful and trustworthy because our hope is based upon the One who created the universe and sent Jesus Christ to reconcile everything, especially humankind, to himself. In his letter to Titus, Paul calls this "our blessed hope, the appearing of the glory of our great God and Savior: Jesus Christ, who gave himself for us to redeem us from all iniquity. . ." (Titus 1:13,14).

This hope is presented in a variety of ways in the New Testament. Hebrews speaks of "the city of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem, as our ultimate destination," a promise guaranteed in the new covenant mediated by Christ. There is nothing in this temporal world in which we presently live that cannot or has not been shaken literally and figuratively. But our hope is in "a kingdom that cannot be shaken." When we see things all about us breaking up and collapsing, we look toward that kingdom unshaken and unshakable.

VISIONS OF HOPE

In Revelation, Christian hope is anchored on the resurrected and glorified Christ who assures us, "I am the Alpha and the Omega, who is and who was and who is to come, the Almighty" (Rev. 1:8). In John's vision Christ says: "Fear not, I am the first and the last, and the living one . . . and I have the keys of Death and Hades" (1:17,18). Revelation 11:15 gives us another allusion to hope: "The kingdom of the world has become the kingdom of our Lord and of his Christ, and he shall; reign forever and ever."

In the Bible and in our own lives there are innumerable ways to speak of the Christian hope, but at the bottom line of each there is one reality. I remember how John Bright put it in The Kindgom of God: "So it was that Jeremiah could never believe that the national ruin was the end. True, he could see no cause to hope; but he never lost hope, because he never lost God." That's the whole story!

Roundup Ready CORN

Achieve Maximum Yield Potential.

Always read and follow label directions. Regulatory approval of grain harvested from seed of Roundup Ready corn is pending in certain export markets and may not be received before the end of 1999. As a result, growers may be restricted from introducing the grain into channels of trade where the potential for export to those markets exists. In such cases, growers must be prepared to feed the grain domestically, or sell it for use in domestic feed markets only. Roundup Ready® and Roundup Ultra® are trademarks of Monsanto Company.

LANCASTER FARMING'S INTERNET HOME PAGE DRAWS FAVORABLE COMMENTS
In recent months, Lancaster Farming joined the wide world of agriculture on the Internet with a homepage that has already started to draw favorable comments from our viewers and traffic counts of 25,000 plus per month for our advertisers. We have worked hard to keep our down on the farm values in this ultra-modern communication system. The first items we put on line, mailbox markets and public sale registry, still bring a lot of people back again and again each week. Farm News headlines, Glenn Shirk's dairy management course and the archives of the Penn State's Dairy and Animal Science Department's columns that run in the paper, have added to the popularity of the site.
Today, we have the Pennsylvania Corn Contest Winners, Accu Weather reports, a featured recipe from Section B, and from time to time we add the program schedules for various conferences and conventions. Tomorrow, who knows? We'll find other things of interest and educational value as they come and go. And we'll keep updating the weather, recipes and news headlines each week.
In addition, we are pleased to announce that a few advertisers have chosen to place banner ads and display pages on-line with us too. When you visit our site you will want to see the farm equipment, auction, and other ads with products and services that are so much a part of our weekly publications. Of course, you can subscribe to Lancaster Farming by the email hot link, and you can find a short history of our forty-two years.
SO, IF YOU HAVE THE OPPORTUNITY TO GO ON-LINE AND WANT A GOOD PLACE TO BOOKMARK, RIDE YOUR MOUSE TO OUR CORN CRIB.

Lewis Berkley Named To Pennsylvania Holstein Hall Of Fame

WILKES-BARRE — Lewis Berkley, Berlin in Somerset County was the recipient of the 1999 Pennsylvania Hall of Fame Award at the Holstein annual meeting last week. Berkley has a rolling herd average of 25,631 pounds of milk, 1,010 pounds of fat and 838 pounds of protein in 63 cows. His BAA is 104.9. He's been a Progressive Breeder award winner for nine years, anda Progressive Genetics award winner for eight years. He has bred 29 excellent cows and sent 19 bulls to studs.

He got his start at an early age. Even though he was too small to reach the pedals on the tractor, he could still steer. So his dad would get him on the tractor, set it at a slow speed, and jump off to tend to other things. He'd come back later to find the boy still making his laps with the tractor and jump back on the tractor, and turn it off.

Very active in 4-H baby beef projects, having shown many champions, his interest didn't turn to dairy cattle until he was ready to go to college. And we in the dairy industry are lucky, because his love of music nearly equals his love of cows; and Lewis Berkley might have chosen to become a jazz musician rather than a dairy farmer.

Lew Berkley was born on April 26, 1931, at Crystal Springs Farm, where he still lives and farms with his wife, Barbara. He is the fifth generation on this Century Farm.

Lew graduated from Berlin Brothersvalley High School where he played clarinet in the marching band. He enrolled at Juniata College, but transferred to Penn State after his freshman year to pursue a degree in animal husbandry. While at Penn State, Lew played in a jazz group. You can picture Lew, kind of laid back and easy going, in a jazz group. Well, he was also a member of the Penn State Blue Band. The Blue Band's cadence is double time, which means members need to nearly run to keep up. Lewis's sisters were always teasing him about getting run over, but Lew can hustle when he has to: and he had a successful Blue Band career.

The United States Army interrupted Lew's Penn State career. During his service with the Corps of Engineers, he spent six months in the Arctic. Those many 24-hour days of darkness in sub-zero blizzard conditions provided lots of time for Lew to contemplate his future. He decided to forego his last two years of college and head home to the farm. He and his dad formed a partnership and developed a good herd of grade cows.

In 1960, a college friend introduced Lew to Barbara Means, a young teacher in the York Suburban School District. They married in 1962. Barb had grown up on a registered Guernsey farm, so the transition to full-time farm wife and business partner came naturally. During their first year of marriage, Lew and Barb bought the home farm from his parents. Lew's parents were wonderfully supportive of the young couple as they worked to achieve full ownership of the operation. They began adding registered Holsteins to the herd.

By the early 1970s, Lew and Barb had a decision to make. They were progressive; they had goals. They had to either expand the grade herd with new facilities, or develop an all-registered breeding herd. Berkline Holsteins was born!

From their hosting field days and judging schools to their many consignments to local, state and even national sales, the Berkline herd became well known. They have been recognized with both the Dairy of Distinction and Master Farmer awards.

The Berkleys have both been active in the Somerset County Holstein Club. Lew has served as state director and on the executive committee. He then served the association as vice president in 1990 and 1991, and as president in 1992 and 1993. He and Barb chaired the President's Reception for the 1995 National Holstein Convention, as well as hosting a farm tour for the convention.

Lew also participated in many community activities including: Trinity United Church of Christ, Berlin Brothersvalley School Board (which he served as president), and directorships of National Bank of Western Pennsylvania, Highland Mutual Insurance and the Somerset County Fair Association. He was even known to play saxophone in some local pubs — after the milking was done, of course. He has played for many years in the Berlin Fife and Drum Corps. Lew loves to see performers in concert. Jaxx is his favorite, but you'll also find him at classic and gospel performances.

Always wanting to improve his skills, Lew has taken an embryo transfer short course at Colorado State University, attended the Graham School in Kansas, and participated in numerous seminars. The Berkleys have shared their home and knowledge over the years with exchange students; and they had the privilege of visiting two of these students in Norway several years ago.

Of course, a very important part of their lives has been their family. The Berkleys were blessed with three daughters, all very involved with 4-H dairy projects. Following in their father's footsteps, the girls all graduated from Penn State.

Michelle, an economics/business major also holds an MBA from the University of Pittsburgh. She is currently working for Genetech, a biotech company based in California, as a senior clinical hospital representative in central Pennsylvania. Michelle and her husband, Roger Romesburg, have built a house on the family farm that they share with their 6-year-old son, Drew.

Nancy and her husband, Todd Imhoff, live in St. Louis. Nicholas, age 4 and Anna, age 2, keep Nancy busy as a full-time mom. Her previous career was in medical sales.

Youngest daughter, Gina, was a communications major with business and Spanish minors. She worked as an accout executive and marketing manager for MBNA in San Francisco. Though successful in her career, she opted for a six-month leave of absence. During that time, she rode her bicycle across America in "The Big Ride" to raise funds for the American Lung Association. Seven hundred and fifty riders, pedaling from Seattle to Washington, D.C., raised six million dollars! This cause was close to Gina's heart because her dad suffers from emphysema. Gina has since relocated to the East Coast, and holds a position in corporate and foundation relations at the National Aquarium in Baltimore.

Lew has been surrounded by girls his whole life — girls in the house and girls in the barn. Sometimes the girls in the house felt the girls in the barn took precedence, but Lew was always there to lend a hand to his daughters, particularly at show time. He had to perform the usual rescues of kids and cows, but the girls showed successfully at the county, district, regional and state levels, including having Berkline Elev Connie named Junior All-Pennsylvania.

Throughout his career, Lew has been generous in letting young employees show animals from the herd. When I talked to Barb and asked her if there was anything special she'd like to relate about Lew for this presentation, her first thought was of Lew's skill as a mentor. Three former employees, who did not live on farms prior to working for the Berkleys, now have their own dairy farms with registered Holsteins. Two of them started as ninth graders having show calves. What an educator, and what an inspiration you must be to young people, Lew.

Three years ago at the Farm Show, Lew sat down to chat with Harvey Stoltzfus at the Pennwood Farm display. He and Harvey had worked together on the PHA Executive Board for several years, and had become good friends. Lew asked Harvey if he had found a farm yet. As the conversation evolved, Lew invited Harvey to Somerset County to see his farm. Within two weeks, the first of many visits took place. Crystal Springs Farms officially became the property of Harvey and Mary Jane and their family in November 1998. Berkline Holsteins will be owned by Pennwood Farms.

Their farm, Lynncrest Holstein, was established in 1981 with 38 head of registered Holsteins, averaging 17,084M 644F with a BAA of 102.8. At that time, they rented their facilities from Kirby's parents. Today they own 48 head of registered Holsteins, along with 4 grades, with a rolling herd average of 23,522M 924F 762P with a BAA of 110.5. In April of 1996, the Horsts purchased their farm from Kirby's parents and are currently having their heifers custom raised at a nearby farm.

They have been active in the Lebanon County Holstein Club, where Kirby has served as a member of the board of directors, president, and vice president, and various other positions with the club. They hosted the 1998 Pennsylvania junior judging school, as well as continuously hosting foreign tour groups, school groups and judging workshops.

Both Kirby and Sheryl have served as 4-H leaders in Lebanon County for many years. Sheryl has also been very active with the Lebanon County dairy promotion committee, having chaired the Lebanon County dairy princess pageant for three years. She is currently serving as the PTF treasurer, Sunday school teacher, and chairperson at their church's mother and daughter banquet.

Lynncrest Holsteins has been very active in marketing registered Holsteins, both domestically and internationally. Embryo transfer plays a large role in the day to day management of the herd. The Horsts have contracted over 60 bulls to A.I. studs, as well as selling hundreds of embryos throughout the world.

In addition, the Horsts have received both the Progressive Breeder Registry Award and the Progressive Genetic Herd Award seven times. In 1998, they were a winner of the Pennsylvania Dairy of Distinction award. They plan to continue to strive to achieve these high standards, which made this recognition possible.

Registered Holsteins will definitely have a bright future as Lynncrest Holsteins. They take an enthusiastic interest in breeding better cattle and being involved in Holstein and community activities.

Pennsylvania Holstein Association is proud to recognize Kirby and Sheryl Horst as our 1999 Distinguished Young Holstein Breeder Award Winner.

Good Calf Quality Increases

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Producing consistent quality beef is possible and necessary for beef cattle industry producers to remain competitive.

That message was repeated in several ways by a number of speakers at a recent Lancaster County Extension Cattle Feeder's Day event, at the Lancaster Farm and Home Center.

The cattle feeder's day event was sponsored by Penn State Extension with support from some agribusinesses and was designed to provide an educational forum for producers interested in learning more about industry and market trends, feeder cattle raising techniques and issues, and completed and ongoing research.

Speakers including H. Louis Moore, Penn State University agricultural economics professor, who discussed the outlook for the feeder cattle market; Jeff Stoltzfus, an adult farmer instructor in the Eastern Lancaster County School District, who discussed nutrient management concerns for cattle feeders; and Tammy Weaver, director of industry relations for the Pennsylvania Beef Council (PBC), a cattle producer-funded beef promotion, marketing and research program.

Issues addressed by those speakers were reported in the Feb. 20 issue of Lancaster Farming.

Others who spoke included Dr. John Thompson, Iowa State University professor of production animal medicine, who discussed establishing valid working relationships between cattle feeders, veterinarians and the cattle being fed; and Dr. John Comerford, Penn State Extension beef specialist who discussed a Penn State survey of cattle feeders (reported last week) and the basics of "expected progeny differences" (EPD).

Also speaking were Dr. Glenn Rogers, North Carolina State University assistant professor of ruminant production medicine, who talked about animal health programs for feedlots; Dr. Erskine Cash, Penn State University professor of animal science, who discussed the practical uses of EPDs in the feeder cattle industry; and Bob Livingston, cattle manager at South Branch Farms, who discussed his use of EPDs and carcass evaluations in a producer-retailer relationship.

Feeder Cattle Health Programs

Dr. Thomson discussed some of the practices being adopted in Iowa, with regard to developing a working relationship between a feeder cattle manager and a veterinarian to develop and maintain a health program.

"We have the technology, but the use of it will require 'facilitators,'" he said, adding that management must have vision and leadership in order to succeed.

More specifically about diseases, Dr. Thomson reported that calves persistently infected with bovine virus diarrhea (BVD) will not be helped by a vaccine. "They will die from mucosal disease," he said.

He also talked about the need for feedlot management to ensure that recommended practices to control diseases are given full attention to detail, and not just lip service.

He discussed a case where salmonellosis was found in an 18,000 head feedlot, with 200 cases in the past few months. He said that it appeared to be a new strain, but where the animals were becoming infected eluded operation managers.

The disease was not at the home farm pens. He said that within six days of being put into sick pens, there was an increase in contamination.

After a review of operations, it was discovered that the disease was being spread from infected animals into the others through contaminated equipment.

After the recommendations to correct the situation were made, some progress was seen, but not nearly what was expected.

The workers who were to implement the biocontrol/sanitation recommendations were interviewed and it was discovered that the recommendations were not actually being carried out, because workers compared their additional duties to those practices carried out at another operation and didn't understand why they had to do the additional practices if the other operation didn't.

After management became aware that recommendations were not being followed, corrections were made and the incidence of disease decreased to almost zero.

When Thomson asked the audience how many used computerized record keeping and farm management information systems, no one responded.

Regardless, he said that there is a new computer software program available for feedlot monitoring that is allowing users to "predict within a waterfill of when to ship" to market.

Monitoring feedlot performance helps with competitiveness, better management of production cycles, and for information gathering to allow better management.

According to Thomson, the current goal for feedlot software is to design a program that works in the "Windows environment." He was referring to a computer program that allows multiple access to documents on the user's screen, that has become a standard program.

Among other issues that involve beef producer and veterinarian/consultant cooperation, Thomson said the industry is seeking a tighter range on carcass specifications, such as limiting extramuscular fat thickness to a maximum of .4-inches.

He said another goal for the United States beef industry is to achieve 70 percent production of low choice of higher with 70 percent yield grade No.1 and No.2; which means looking at marbeling, red meat production, yield and weight.

Something that can't be achieved, "If we don't have the right genetic crosses."

He said that carcass value is 65 percent management and 35 percent genetics, and genetic improvement is slow. The use of EPDs needs a lot of cooperation within the industry, and the industry is looking at using ultrasound testing to determine carcass quality of live animals.

"We have a lot of veterinarians receiving training, going out to feedlots as a service, telling what to implant, etc., in order to achieve a product for the market," he said.

Southern Feeders

Dr. Glenn Rogers, from North Carolina State University, shared some of his experience in the South with the feeder cattle business.

He said that most of the calves that are purchased through the livestock auctions are unvaccinated, uncastrated bulls and those who purchase calves for feeding out need to careful about the stock they begin with if they want to produce a marketable product.

Rogers suggested that when a shipment of calves arrives at a feedlot, the animals should be immediately inspected for shipping injuries and bring it to the attention of the shipper.

Secondly, the calves should be examined for clinical evidence of

hances Of Quality Finishing

respiratory disease.

However, he advised against establishing a set program whereby each and every load of calves and each and every calf gets treated the same.

He said that every load of calves is different and it is not advisable to attempt to use some blanket program for treating them.

But those who intend to feed calves need to understand the trade off between purchase price and risk, Rogers said.

According to the ruminent production medicine professor, purchased calves can be divided into two risk catagories— high risk and low risk.

High risk calves are those uncastrated bulls coming from an unkown source. It can be assumed, he said that if bulls are uncastrated they were not vaccinated and not properly immunized. They require more management and initial expense to get them off to a good start.

According to Rogers, studies show that bull calves that are not castrated until processed at a feeder farm have twice the risk of becoming ill as do those bull calves that are castrated earlier.

Additionally, he said that producers can lose a lot of potential profit because they receive pregnant heifers. The only way around it is to buy guaranteed open heifers to feed out.

Low risk cattle are those that have been properly immunized and come from a known source. Those calves generally require little additional inputs from the feeder.

For high risk calves purchased through an auction house, he advised minimizing the risk by ensuring the calves are a minimum of 42 days old before shipment to the feedlot, and they should be shipped from the sale barn within 24 to 36 hours of purchase. They need to be identified and given appropriate health treatments.

According to Rogers, "Every hour delay in processing (calves) past 36 hours increases morbidity (the occurance of illness) by 1 percent."

He said that calves should be identified by lot number and individual number, and he said that he also encourages cross-referencing the sale barn identification and date of purchase. "That has helped us identify problem sale barns," he said.

Calves purchased through sale barns in the South have shown to have a fairly high incidence of illness, while those calves purchased directly from a farm in the country have shown no morbidity, according to a chart that Rogers displayed.

He recommended taking the temperature of calves, but not immediately upon being offloaded from the cattle truck, because they are still stressed. He recommended allowing the calves to rest overnight, and then take them in small groups and take their temperature the next morning and have them processed before noon. The temperatures should be taken before the calves are sent through the chute. He said 104 degrees is a good threshold temperature for concern.

Rogers reviewed the vaccinations that are administered during processing and urged using an injection site forward of the shoulder, in order to retain the highest value of the carcass.

Because of the number of times that calves and feeder cattle can changes hands during their production cycle, Rogers said that many animals can get overvaccinated. Again, knowing the source of the calves and having access to the treatment records can help greatly in eliminating uneccessary vaccinations.

For parasite control, Rogers said that if the cattle have been 120 days on grass, and were given a bolus when they were turned out, they probably don't need additional dewormer.

For implanting growth enhancers, he reminded producers to keep their utensiles clean between animals.

Overall, he said that no program can replace competent management. He said the "take home message" he wanted to provide was: "Consult a veterinarian to develop a feedlot preventative health program tailored to your operation."

EPDs Help Beef Quality

Comerford reviewed the basics of EPDs, which are essentially statistical indicators of a sire's tendency to pass on certain traits.

EPDs cannot be used to predict with 100 percent accuracy, and they don't differentiate between dominant and recessive genes.

What EPDs do is compare the traits of the offspring of a sire to the rest of the offspring of the breed's sires.

In other words, a bell curve can be graphed indicating the occurance of a trait in the general population of a beef breed. Traits being monitored include such things as carcass quality and birthing ease.

When the traits of the offspring of specific bulls are similarly graphed and compared to the graph of the general population, the likelihood of certain traits reoccuring in the sire's progeny can be roughly predicted.

The degree of occurance of a trait within the population of offspring provides the degree of reliability in prediction.

Comerford explained that for some traits the technique for tracking and establishing EPDs is simple, such as for coat color. However, for some traits, such as carcass quality, there are a number of traits that can affect the overall structure and character of the carcass, so determining carcass EPDs is not as simple.

The practical use of EPDs was explained by Erskine Cash, who was accompanied from State College by a number of his students.

Cash said that cattle feeders need only to look at their bottom line to determine the relevance of EPDs, especially with value-based marketing or marketing cattle on a "grid."

It was explained that marketing cattle on a grid really means establishing a sale arrangement with a buyer so that the producer is paid based upon the carcass quality of the beef, instead of being paid on the basis of a live evaluation.

For those producers who feed out cattle with known sires and known EPDs, the end market product can be predicted within a fairly close range.

If a producer knows the expected quality of the carcass he is producing, he has the ability to gain more profit from the increased value, as long as the buyer is sensitive to purchasing quality.

Further, the cattle feeder can potentially reduce overhead because inputs can be better predicted when the genetic outcome is more predictable.

According to most of the speakers the main problem with the beef industry is the lack of consistent carcass quality. Without using ultrasound and other high-tech tools to determine carcass composition, EPDs can provide producers with a more affordable tool for producing what the market wants, and to gain premium prices for premium quality.

Cash said he predicted that EPD traits will be expanded beyond the current traits, because of more specific demands for carcass qualities.

For the producer, EPDs can also provide increased efficiency as well. Cash said that it takes a lot

ICMPA, DFA Merger Will Happen

KANSAS CITY, MO – The farmer leaders of two dairy producer-owned cooperatives, Independent Cooperative Milk Producers Association (ICMPA) of Grand Rapids, Michigan, announced, today, that merger is certain ICMPA President Bob Naerebout reports that a substantial majority of ICMPA's dairy farmer members have signed consent agreements authorizing a merger with DFA. The merger would officially take place March 1, 1999.

"The final tally is not yet in. However, at this time, I'm very pleased to report that our dairy farm families have responded positively to the merger," says Naerebout, a Missaukee County, Michigan dairy farmer and president of ICMPA's board of director. "ICMPA's members have until the end of the month to file their consent forms. It's critical that our members do this. After all, ICMPA is their co-op and its important that they participant in this process."

ICMPA is a regional cooperative that operates in Michigan and parts of northern Ohio and Indiana marketing more than 900 million pounds of milk annually for their 730 dairy farmer members. DFA markets and processes more than 38 billion pounds of milk for its 22,000 dairy farmer members in 45 states across the U.S.

Herman Brubaker, West Alexandria, Ohio, dairy farmer and chairman of DFA's board of directors, echoes Naerebout's reaction to the merger. "This is good news. Dairy farmers working together in the marketplace have a greater opportunity for supplying customers and, ultimately, consumers with efficient, high quality supplies of fresh milk and value-added manufactured dairy products. DFA's members proudly welcome ICMPA members into the organization."

Naerebout and Brubaker agree that the merger between ICMPA and DFA is a good match." The mission statements of both cooperatives are very similar," says Brubaker. "Both ICMPA and DFA are focused on working together for quality, efficiency and the future security of dairy farm families. This is so important in today's competitive and ever-changing marketplace. With like philosophies, we can accomplish so much more for the benefit of farmers, customers and consumers."

New Area Created

With this merger, DFA will realign its membership and operational regions to include a seventh Area to better serve the needs of its new and present dairy producer members in Michigan, Indiana, Ohio western Pennsylvania and parts of Kentucky and West Virginia.

The new, yet-to-be-named DFA Area will be headquartered near Cleveland, Ohio. ICMPA's present office, warehouse, and lab located in Grand Rapids, Michigan will remain as a DFA service center.

Don Branson, who currently serves as vice president and chief operating officer for DFA's Northeast area, has been reassigned to oversee the day-to-day operations and management of members and marketing services for the new Area. Branson, who reports directly to DFA president and CEO Gray Hanman, has served the dairy industry and DFA predecessor cooperatives since 1975.

"On behalf of DFA's producer leadership and staff, we look forward to working with DFA's newest members in Michigan and northern Indiana and Ohio to maximize returns and efficiently market their milk," says Branson.

Pennsylvania's Dairy Producers Divided Over Compact

Anti-Compact

Earl Fink, executive vice president of the Pennsylvania Association of Milk Dealers, testified against joining the Compact.

John Ligo, a Mercer County dairy farmer with a 200-head milking string, representing the less-than 1-year-old Association of Independent Dairy Producers, testified against joining the Compact.

John Ackerman, a dairy farmer and president of the 15-member Monroe County Milk Producers Cooperative, testified against joining the Compact.

David McCorkle, representing the Pennsylvania Food Merchants Association, testified against joining the Compact.

Testimony submitted to the Committee on behalf of Hershey Foods Corporation opposed joining the Compact.

Dr. Robert Yonkers, chief economist and director of policy analysis for the International Dairy Foods Association, testified against expanding the Compact.

Background

The Northeast Dairy Compact is essentially an interstate agreement among the New England states over the pricing of beverage milk. It is governed by a commission that consists of representatives of the dairy industry and consumers, with two members per state.

The Compact Commission sets regulations for pricing and handling of milk and has authority to set production quotas, according to testimony Tuesday.

The main value of the Compact is to set a minimum value on beverage milk. That minimum value is a floor price to reflect the cost of production and the consumer price in Boston.

Though more complicated than can be presented here, in essence, the Compact floor price is to provide an over-market premium should the market value fall below cost of production.

If the USDA basic formula price (BFP) — a price derived from a formula that accounts for the market values of milk and milk components and products, such as cheese — falls below the Compact value for beverage milk, the difference between the two is provided as a premium to dairy farmers supplying the Compact with milk.

If the USDA BFP is higher than the Compact minimum, then dairy producers supplying the Compact region don't receive any additional money.

Under the Compact pricing system, in effect what happens is that the profit margins of the middlemen, otherwise referred to as processor/handlers and retailers, are caused to fluctuate, while dairy producer and consumer prices remain stabilized.

However, the Compact has authority to regulate the amount of milk available for use within the Compact region. During shortages it can allow more milk to come in. When there is a surplus, it can prevent milk from coming in.

The free-market system works differently.

The dairy production industry is generally not characterized as integrated, or as having marketing alliances. Instead, anyone with the necessary assets (cows, land, equipment, labor and capital) to produce milk for marketing can do so.

Competition between producers to capture and keep markets keeps the overall price of milk low.

Further, expansion of dairy farms can increase the production of milk without a specific market. That can drive down the overall price dairy farmers receive for milk.

It has been shown through a number of marketing studies used by milk promotion and research agencies that the amount of milk consumed (demand) as a beverage changes very little, and commands the highest value.

Other uses of milk and milk components change little as well, although because certain components can be stockpiled there can be more variations in availability and thus supply to meet demand.

While many things can affect consumer demand and industry demand for milk, the main variable in the dairy industry is the amount of milk produced by farmers.

Bad weather, the cost and quality of feed and other operational costs, as well as the time of year, are some of the main influencing factors in the amount of milk produced.

The dairy production industry varies in the volume it supplies for market, and the price dairy producers receive reflects that variability.

Increases in the production of milk forces milk handlers to find other markets for the excess milk.

The dairy industry is different from many others because most dairy producers are producing on speculation — when they milk their cows they don't know if that milk will have a market, much less a profit, until after the milk is used. Dairy farmers also pay to transport their milk to a market.

Depending upon the quality and volume of supply of milk provided to a handler, the actual breakdown in the use of milk and the respective values creates the overall value of milk produced and used.

For example, currently about 60 percent of the milk in the Compact states is used for beverage use (Class I).

The Compact has been in effect since 1997, and was included in the 1996 Farm Bill as a means for the minor dairy producing New England states to protect the income and businesses of their dairy producers from competition from nearby high dairy producing states.

The New England states are a dairy-deficit region, meaning dairy production there can't fulfill consumer demand. Milk has been regularly shipped into the New England states from New York and Pennsylvania, where dairy production exceeds instate demand.

The 1996 Farm Bill set up a program for the dismantling of the national agricultural commodity support price program in effect since the 1940s.

Eliminating federal price supports was necessary in order to achieve free trade agreements, specifically the General Agreement on Tarrifs and Trade (GATT).

For years the Uraguay Round of talks to reauthorize an international GATT was stymied because of agricultural protection programs.

In order for the United States to export agricultural commodities to trading nations, negotiators on behalf of the United States attempted to eliminate other nation's agricultural support programs which have unfairly dumped product on the world market and created low world prices of commodities.

Those low prices undercut the price needed by United States producers who are among the most efficient dairy producers in the world, sans New Zealand.

Furthermore, while those nations that were dumping product on the global market and assumed debt to maintain their agricultural sectors, the United States overall had been trading at a deficit (except for agriculture) and incurring more and more national debt.

To escape the pyramid scheme-like trap of protectionism — incurring national debt to support business sectors, maintain jobs and standards of living — which had been generally practiced by the trading nations, the movement was made to create a fairer international free market system.

The collapse of the Communist Party control over the former Soviet Union provided a perceived window of opportunity for creating international free-trade.

For those unfamiliar with the period, the theory was widely expressed that free trade and fair competition could allow nations around the world to capitalize on their respective natural resources and serve as economic engines to benefit their citizens without propping up inefficient and unecessary industries.

The experience of the last several years has shown that putting the theory to practice has not been easy.

In the United States, the Northeast Interstate Dairy Compact was sought by Vermont's U.S. Sen. Patrick Leahy. It has become common knowledge that despite the fact that the Compact went against the direction the nation's leadership had been taking to create free trade relationships, it was allegedly allowed because of a deal cut by Sen. Leahy with other members of the United States Congress in order to gain political support to secure federal campaign funding.

It was the expressed intent of the United States' Congress, especially those in majority, to decouple federal commodity support pricing from agriculture. The Compact was not to last beyond April 1999. Then, they extended it to Oct. 1.

While the legislation authorizing the Northeast Compact allowed states continguous to the New England states to join, it set up a two-level procedure to do so.

First, the individual states would have to create legislation that allowed inclusion into the Compact, and secondly, the U.S. Congress would have to authorize the inclusion of those states into the Compact.

In December, the New York Legislature passed legislation that enables it to join the Northeast Dairy Compact. On Tuesday several people who testified commented on the fact that the New York Compact-enabling legislation only was approved when it was attatched to a bill that gave the New York Legislature a significant pay raise.

Arguments Against

For brevity, the arguments against Pennsylvania attempting to enter into the Compact, or even promoting its expansion, were based on the belief that the marketplace is the best judge of value of any commodity.

It was argued that, especially in an industry (such as dairy) where production and supply are not directly linked to demand, the value of that commodity can only be fairly be determined by what the market will bear.

A low price discourages and curtails overproduction and encourages increased efficieny and lower cost of production; high prices encourage increased production and increased supply.

Having the market establish the value of a commodity produced on speculation creates a range of prices over time, with the extent of the range dependent on the ability of the production sector to respond to demand.

It was also argued that:

- Market forces ought to continue to be allowed to determine the price of milk because it has done a better job than with an artificial floor price and without government intervention.
- Many billions of federal money has been spent since the 1970s to try to curtail unneeded dairy production, with no good result.
- Dairy farmer prices for 1996 and 1998 were the highest ever, when averaged over the year. Futures market projections as of Feb. 22 projected a 1999 average BFP of $12.95, which would be the third highest ever. The futures market BFP have been shown to track very closely to what the eventual USDA-determined BFP actually is.
- Additional arguments by dairy farmers against the Compact were that they want to compete freely and honestly to be suppliers of milk. They don't want their competition to be artificial or continue when it shouldn't.
- The Compact has the ability to create a quota system and could punish operators who otherwise have the right to grow if the market will bear the added product.
- Expanding the Compact would negate the benefits it has provided the dairy-deficit New England states. It was reported that the use of milk there under the Compact has run about 60 percent used for beverage. If the Compact were to be expanded to include the dairy surplus states of New York and Pennsylvania, the Compact region milk use would drop to about 40-percent beverage use, which would result in an overall decrease in value of the milk.
- The flow of milk follows the money — wherever a higher price is being paid, the milk will flow — and an artificially high price in the Compact area would attract even more milk than the region already has.
- High milk prices stimulate farmers to add cows and increase milk production in order to increase profits and their standard of living.
- The USDA is about to announce a final proposal for changing the way it prices milk and the state Legislature and the dairy industry ought to wait until the proposal is made in March before pursuing expansion of the Northeast Dairy Compact.
- The number of dairy farms has decreased over the years, but the amount of milk produced has increased because technology and efficiencies of size have allowed this to happen, nothing else.

Arguments For

Arguments for joining the Compact were:

- That farmers' milk gets used no matter what, and every farmer ought to be compensated for his cost of production, or else there won't be any milk.
- The best way to preserve farmland and small family farms is to ensure that dairy farmers make a profit.
- Surveys of consumers have shown that consumers would be willing to pay more for milk if they could trust that the additional money would be going to the farmer.
- Keeping small family dairy farms in rural Pennsylvania maintains the economies of rural Pennsylvania, because those farmers can pay for services and stimulate job creation.
- The Compact milk pricing mechanism is a safety net, not a panacea. Farmers would only be protected by the Compact premium on Class I milk if milk prices fell below a level (to be determined) of cost of production.
- The Compact would mean stable prices for farmers and stable prices for consumers, regardless of the price.
- The Compact would not create enough incentive to increase production.
- Low prices cause some farmers to add cows to increase production to increase cash flow (though not profits) to pay bills. A floor price only protects against bankrupcty during low price periods.
- The number of dairy farms has decreased significantly.

PMMB Unaffected

Also testifying was Beverly Minor, chairman of the Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board, who with husband Sam Minor, have been dairy farming for a number of years.

According to Minor, the Compact would not affect the authorities or practices of the PMMB.

In addition to the widely understood and unique among most states authority of the PMMB to set minimum retail, wholesale and producer prices on Class I milk produced, processed and sold within the state, the agency's main purpose is to provide oversight to the industry to protect consumers and producers.

That would not change, she said.

When questioned after providing a statement, Minor said that expanding the Compact would likely change the percentage of Class I milk used within the Compact region to about 40 percent, from the current 60 percent.

ADA/DC Middle Atlantic Headquarters In Philadelphia

PHILADELPHIA – On Dec. 14, 1998, American Dairy Association Day Council Middle Atlantic (ADA/DC) opened its new headquarters office in downtown Philadelphia.

ADA/DC offices formerly based in Southampton, PA and Towson, Md. were consolidated into the new headquarters office. Satellite offices will remain open in Reston, Va. and Carlise, Pa.

ADA/DC Director of Communications Jan Stanton recently discussed ADA/DC's decision to move into Philadelphia.

"One of the deciding factors involved with choosing downtown Philadelphia for ADA/DC's new location was a much more favorable rental rate for our offices."

Stanton explained that there are other reasons behind the office consolidation. "We felt that closing two offices and moving to one centralized location would be a much more cost-effective way to utilize our funding from our dairy farmers."

This move comes after quite a bit of change for the organization.

This summer Dairy Council Inc. merged with Dairy Council of Greater Metropolitan Washington D.C. to create Dairy Council Middle Atlantic. Once this merger was complete, Dairy Council Middle Atlantic consolidated with Middle Atlantic Milk Marketing Association (MAMMA) to form ADA/DC Middle Atlantic.

ADA/DC represents a coming together of organizations with a common purpose: the integration of programs and more efficient use of dairy farmers dollars.

ADA/DC Middle Atlantic is a regional milk promotion organization funded by dairy farmers to increase dairy product demand in the Middle Atlantic region through advertising, communications, and nutrition education.

ADA/DC Middle Atlantic is affiliated with Dairy Management, Inc., the national organization responsible for promotion, advertising, nutrition education and research funded by dairy checkoff dollars.

For more information about ADA/DC and its 1999 plans, contact our headquarters office at (800) 220-5686.

Maryland/Virginia Announces Communication Internship

RESTON, Va. — College students pursuing a career in agricultural communications are encouraged to apply for Maryland and Virginia's second annual communications internship by Friday, March 19. The 12-week summer internship is based in Reston Virginia, and will provide experience in news writing, photography, desk-top publishing, web site development and member relations.

The intern will be responsible for writing articles, interviewing members and taking photographs for the cooperative's monthly publication. Additional opportunities will be provided in writing news releases, designing newsletters and developing the cooperative's website. As a Maryland and Virginia representative, the intern can also apply to win an all-expense paid trip to a national communications conference in Omaha, Nebraska — sponsored by Nationwide Insurance.

According to Stephanie Meyers, the director of communication and education, "Maryland and Virginia's communications internship is an incredible opportunity to gain first-hand experience in the day-to-day rewards and challenges of a career in agricultural communications. Both solo and collaborative projects will build the intern's writing, photography and organizational skills. Networking with cooperative staff and industry leaders will be another internship highlight."

Lonette Luther, former intern from Damascus, Md., said, "I highly recommend this internship to anyone considering a career in agricultural communications. The assignments were both challenging and educational, and the variety of projects expanded both my resume and portfolio. This 12-week 'crash course' was vital to the beginning of my communications career."

Eligibility

To be eligible, applicants must have completed their sophommore year of college and be pursuing a career in agricultural communications. # Pond Workshop March 4

ELKTON, Md. — With more than 400 ponds in Cecil County, ponds are a very important part of our rural landscape. Ponds are valued for a variety of purposes including aesthetics, recreational fishing, swimming, irrigation, aquaculture, and wildlife habitat. No matter what your purpose, chances are you could improve your pond.

To help you better manage your pond, the Cecil County Office of Maryland Cooperative Extension will be holding a Pond Management Workshop on Thursday, March 4, from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. at the Elkton Library. The library is located at 301 Newark Avenue (Rt. 279) across from the Singerly Fire Company. Those of you physically able are asked to park in the fire company east parking lot to allow space for regular library patrons.

Speakers for the night will be Don Webster, marine science agent with MCE, Dr. Reggie Harrell finfish aquaculture specialist with Maryland Sea Grant: and Lindsay Tulloch, district conservationist with the Natural Resources Conservation Service.

Topics include water quality, stocking for recreational fishing, aquatic vegetation control, algae control, aquaculture opportunities, and pond design, construction, renovation. Ample time will be available for questions.

The workshop is free and open to the public. For more information, contact David Wilson, extension educator with Maryland Cooperative Extension, (410) 996-5280 or (410) 658-4041.

Benchmarks For Dairy Producers Now Available

MIDDLETOWN, (Dauphin Co.) – In the changing world of diary farming, it is increasingly important for dairymen to assess how well their business operation f is performing. Now, Pennsylvania dairy farmers have available standards of "benchmarks" to help measure their dairy farm production and business success. These benchmarks can be found on the Internet at http://www.psu.edu/dept/aers/bench/index.htm.

Developed as a project of the Pennsylvania Dairy Stakeholders, the Internet site provides clearly identifiable production, profitability, and business benchmarks, or standards, for three different herd sizes. Descriptions of the benchmarks enable a producer to develop comparable estimates for their own operation by utilizing their existing farm financial and production records.

"Individual dairy producers face many challenges as they deal with changing dairy structure, new technology, and the need to increase production and profitability," according to Penn State's Agricultural Economist Dr. Milton Hallberg. "Comparing an individual farm's information to a standard set of benchmarks can be very meaningful as a starting point in assessing current practices and planning future changes."

Selection of the nineteen different production, profitability and business benchmark categories is based on both their usefulness as a measure and their availability on most dairy farms. Production examples include percentage of heats detected, herd somatic cell count, and dry matter intake per pound of milk. Examples in the profitability area are milk sold per worker, net farm income per cow, and family living expense. Financial measures include assets per cow, return on equity and debt-asset ration.

The benchmarks available on this Internet site were developed from the PA Farm Bureau and the PA DHIA record-keeping systems and are representative of a set of Pennsylvania dairy farms in 1997. The information will be updated as new information becomes available. Dairy producers who do not have access to the Internet can contact their County Extension Agent for access to the benchmarks and related materials.

The benchmarks were developed by the Pennsylvania Dairy Stakeholders in conjunction with the Department of Agricultural Economics and Rural Sociology at Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences. Persons involved in the task force that developed the information included: Dr. Milton Hallberg, task force co-chairman and Penn State Professor or Agricultural Economic; Boyd Wolff, task force co-chairman and former Pennsylvania Secretary of Agriculture; Joel Rotz, PA Farm Bureau; Jonas Kauffman, Keystone Farm Credit; George Wilcox, Erie County Extension; David Slusser, PA DHIA; Dr Larry Hutchinson, Penn State Extension Veterinarian; and, Dr. Bob Parsons, and Dr. George Greaser from the Department of Agricultural Economics at Penn State.

Organizations and individuals are encouraged to link the dairy benchmark Internet site to other appropriate dairy and farm management information sites. Printed copies of the information can be made directly from the website. Questions or comments can be addressed to the Department of Agricultural Economics at Penn State by calling 814-865-5461, or the Pennsylvania Dairy Stakeholders at 717-948-6328.

Profitability Symposium Speakers Focus On New Technologies, Philosophies

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Environmental and rural issue experts agreed on one thing during a two-day seminar about the future of Pennsylvania agriculture: protecting the commonwealth's water supply, stemming odor problems, and working with urban neighbors while trying to operate profitable farms are tall tasks.

But they can be done, as long as producers keep open minds about the methodologies and technologies that are pouring out of universities and industries.

One thing is certain, according to an expert who spoke at the Pennsylvania Agriculture in the 21st Century Symposium on Profitability Thursday afternoon at the Holiday Inn Harrisburg East: while only 2 percent of the U.S. population farms, the "voting power of 98 percent is driving the system," said Ed Rajotte of the Department of Entomology at Penn State.

Rajotte was one of several panelists who offered commentary on a discussion about sustaining profitable production with environmental stewardship.

Another Penn State faculty member, Tim Kelsey, works with some non-farm groups who regularly create policy at the local level. Kelsey, associate professor of environmental and rural sociology at Penn State, offered comments during a panel discussing the study of public policy in the next century.

He said that the general public's perception of animal agriculture is no longer the idyllic, family farm image once portrayed. Now the number one concern is "factory farms," ultra-large scale animal feeding operations dotting Pennsylvania's rural landscape.

Kelsey said that rural landowners who live among the farms see this as "no longer a farm, this is a factory," he said. "At what point does a farm become a factory?

"Is there a point at which the farm no longer fits our image of farms and should be treated differently?" he asked more than 300 people registered for the two-day symposium.

Others who spoke to the hundreds of educators, legislators, public officials, producers, and agri-industry representatives attending the symposium agreed there could come a time when Pennsylvania agriculture will mirror what happened to the coal industry, according to Charles Ramberg from the New Bolton Center.

During panel commentary after the plenary session on profitable production with environmental stewardship, Ramberg pointed out the amount of waste is generated to give us food.

For the Pittsburgh steel industry, it took three tons of coal to create one ton of steel. Seventy percent of the environmental inputs in ag are wasted. Like steel, noted Ramberg, will the agriculture industry, as a result of environmental concerns, be eventually shipped off shore?

It doesn't have to, if producers take steps to avail themselves of current technology and adapt that technology to their operation, according to nutrition management and odor experts.

While a large part of the nutrients going into animal operations are unused, the amount of nutrients excreted into manure can be brought down "by doing a better job of (feed) formulation," said E.T. Kornegay of the Department of Animal and Poultry Science of the Virginia Polytechnic and State University, Blacksburg, Va.

Kornegay also pointed to the vital environmental concerns driving a lot of aspects of animal feeding operations. Trouble is, hogs don't utilize nutrients very efficiently, like a lot of animals. Even humans can be similarly compared.

But a typical hog utilizes only 20-55 percent of the available nitrogen in the feed, and 25-70 percent of the calcium.

The hog doesn't make good of minerals and other micronutrients either, using only about 10-40 percent of the magnesium, 10-40 percent of the potassium, 10-40 percent of the zinc, 10-25 percent of the copper, 5-35 percent of the iron, and 8-40 percent of the manganese.

Phosphorous, scrutinized heavily by environmentalists in the past several years, doesn't get used well by the pig, either. A hog uses only 20-60 percent of the phosphorus — and that's "really pushing it," said Kornegay. Actually, "it's more like 40 percent," he said.

Trying to bring the use of these nutrients into line "is a tough egg to handle," he said.

The challenge, of coming up with high-tech, innovative solutions to recycling these nutrients, has been brought on by the public's "zest for cheap, high-quality products," he said.

But those nutrients excreted into the environment can be managed, he insisted at the symposium. Kornegay outlined nine strategies that would go a long way to managing those excess nutrients:

- Strategy 1: Reduce excesses fed to reduce what is excreted. For too long, producers have been feeding large safety margins, more than the animal requires by overformulating feeds. In many cases, calcium and other nutrients are fed at double, triple, even quadruple the amounts required. Those also include amino acid imbalances.
- Strategy 2: Follow the principle of diminishing returns. Formulate diets to meet needs of animals. Too much fed can cost too much for what that extra feeding is worth.
- Strategy 3: Obtain accurate knowledge of "bioavailability" of the nutrient requirements of the animal at various stages of its growth and its physiological state. Know content and bioavailability of ingredients in feed.
- Strategy 4: Enhance nutrient digestibility with the addition of enzymes, bioadditives, and processing methods. The use of phytase is an example. The phytase, an enzyme, breaks phytate in plant ingredients to make phosphorous available to poultry, hogs, and other species. Increase the phytase level in the diet. But Kornegay cautioned that even with phytase, an expensive enzyme, 100 percent digestibility is still unattainable.
- Strategy 5: Use genetically modified feedstuffs to improve bioavailability. For example, the use of low phytic acid and nutrient dense corn varieties can make phosphorous more available to the animal. Normal corn has only 15-25 percent bioavailable phosphorous, whereas low phytic acid corn has 55-70 percent availability. The low phytic acid corn is not on the market yet, but it will be, given time.
- Strategy 6: More bioavailable forms of minerals and crystalline amino acids. These could lead to a significant reduction in nitrogen excreted.
- Strategy 7: Use more phase feeding and split-sex feeding methods. This type of feeding more accurately meets the animal's nutrient requirements.
- Strategy 8: Reduce waste by proper management of feeders and waterers.
- Strategy 9: Use improved animal genetics to boost feed efficiency and growth rates. Also, control disease and parasites, and provide a healthy environment in the confined operations.

Using these strategies in conjunction with more rigid, well-defined ag zone areas will stem some concerns and promote more tolerance of the public to modern animal agriculture.

Dwaine Bundy, professor of ag engineering at Iowa State University, Ames, Iowa, noted that odor control begins with the tools necessary to measure them. Bundy noted strongly that odors from livestock production units are "nontoxic" (outside the building), and are a simple nuisance, for the most part. But the public's increasing insistence on a "no-tolerance" policy upsets the ag engineer, since many are exposed to the nuisance odors only a very small percentage of time.

Yet, increasingly, odor concerns are dictating how sites will be located and built.

(The results of many of Bundy's studies were detailed on the front page of the Dec. 19, 1998 issue of Lancaster Farming.)

Only briefly, during the first day of the symposium, was the topic of how to keep agriculture profitable discussed. One speaker, David S. Walton, director of global business management with the FMC Corp. Ag Products Group, said that producers need to work with crops having traits other than simply commodity items.

They have to be geared to support a certain industrial or pharmaceutical use, with fetter feed efficiency, less protein discharge, and other things to make them more environmentally sound.

Biotechnology will be as "big as the Green Revolution," he said. Europe is resisting these developments "for their own competitive advantage," but the real growth for chemicals lies outside the U.S.

In this country, "acreage is stable, people are using what they have." But there remains tremendous opportunity for countries outside the U.S. — who could rival or exceed the U.S. in production of many crops.

In Pennsylvania, there are 400,000 acres of soybeans grown. But on one farm in Brazil, a grower manages 40,000 acres alone.

These large-scale operations are areas of potential growth in the use of pesticides.

John C. Keene, professor of city and regional planning and chair of the faculty senate of the University of Pennsylvania, noted that producers who want to keep farmland from diminishing should work closely to renovate the inner city, keep the people in the existing infrastructure, rather than scattering them out in the rural areas.

Richard (Dick) Newpher, executive director of the American Farm Bureau Federation, noted that whenever policy decision are made, "emotion and rhetoric have no place in the discussion on food supply," he said.

The general public must someday understand that "everything we put into our mouths can kill us outright, give us cancer, or give us some other health problem," said Newpher, in the right amounts.

He told those attending, who help set public policy, not to follow a "one size fits all" mentality when determining the fate of American agriculture.

Too long, agriculture has been singled out as an environmental culprit. With the Clean Water Act, the public wants agriculture to have "zero" discharge from point or nonpoint sources. Yet "most municipal sewage treatment plants are not at the zero discharge level," he said.

For determining future policy, Newpher urged those attending the two-day symposium to oppose anyone who doesn't have a professional, scientific background in the decision-making process.

"Unfounded and amateur science have no place in determining our future priorities to solve real problems," he said.

Register Today For Lebanon Holstein Tour

MYERSTOWN (Lebanon Co.) — The Lebanon County Holstein Club has announced its plans for a March 11 spring tour.

For those not on the mailing list of the club's newsletter who would enjoy participating, reservations need to be made today, Feb. 27.

Call Vincent Wagner of Myerstown at (717) 949-2046, or Ken Reist at (717) 272-5527. The cost of the tour is $10 per person. Lunch is provided.

According to the newsletter, the Lebanon County Holstein Club's tour plans are to visit four Holstein breeding dairy farms in York County and Maryland.

The tour bus is to leave promptly at 7:30 a.m., March 11, from Fisher Bus Company, located at 1715 Grace Avenue, north of the city of Lebanon; or, for those in the southern part of the county, depart at 7:45 a.m. from the Lebanon Area Fairgrounds.

Return time to Fisher Bus Company is estimated at 5 p.m.

The first farm to be visited is Heindel Farm in Brogue, York County.

Dan Hushon is manager of the operation. The Hushon family breeds and shows both registered Holsteins and Brown Swiss.

The Heindel Farm consists of a 200-cow tie stall barn, designed with with stalls in two rows. Production is about 24,800 pounds of milk on twice-per-day milking.

Currently the herd consists of six contract cows and eight to 10 contract Holstein heifers; and 18 milking Brown Swiss, three of which are contracted.

Recently installed was a 6-inch PVC waterline outfitted with waterbowls designed to serve two cows at once.

Also in York County, the tour is to next visit the Delta dairy farm of Scott and April Cooper and family.

The Coopers' farm has a 60-cow tie stall barn and average production is about 27,000 pounds milk on three times-per-day milking. It is the high production herd for the county.

Scott, a past state Holstein director for York County, worked for his father for 10 years, gradually purchasing herd animals. He recently took over ownership of the herd. He also recently installed 6-inch PVC water lines, but with a single water bowl. The tour is to next dip down into Maryland and visit the Woodbine Farms in Airville, operated by three brothers — George Knight III, Paul Knight and James Knight. They managed a 230-cow herd in loose housing, and crop farm more than 1,000 acres of land.

The herd has a rolling herd average of 22,000 pounds of milk on twice-per-day milking, and a BAA of 105.5. Currently in the herd is a Excellent 93-point Bova Glow daughter with production of more than 50,000 pounds of milk.

In addition, the farm features a recently completed feeder barn.

Harold Smith's My Ladys Manor dairy farm is the next planned stop of the tour. The 280-cow operation has a rolling herd average of 22,000 pounds milk and a BAA of 105.

The farm has sold a number of bulls into artificial insemination use, and they have heavily flushed their Ladys Manor Winchester family line of Holsteins. The farm also has several contracts for genetics to Japan.

Ag Issues Forum March 11

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — The monthly meeting of Ag Issues Forum is scheduled March 11 at Kreider's Restaurant at 7:30 a.m.

Land O'Lakes Reports 1998 Results, Significant Growth Highlighted

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. — Increased sales, strong earnings, $40 million in cash returned to members and significant equity growth were among the highlights of the financial report presented today to nearly 3,000 delegates and visitors attending the Land O'Lakes 1999 Annual Meeteing at the Minneapolis (Minn.) Convention Center.

The national food and farm supply cooperative's 1998 financial results included: $5.2 billion in sales, $68.6 million in net earnings and $40.3 million in cash returned to members, Land O'Lakes Chief Financial Officer Ron Ostby reported.

"The increase in sales, up 23 percent in 1999, was the result of a number of key acquisitions and mergers, as well as strong system-wide marketing efforts," Ostby said. "Net earnings, however, were adversely affected by the downturn in the swine markets and global overcapacity in nitrogen manufacturing."

Despite intensely competitive and volatile markets, Land O'Lakes achieved its fifth consecutive year of increased Dairy Foods earnings, all-time highs in seed volume and earnings, increased volume and earnings in feed and improved earnings from wholesale agronomy operations.

Ostby went on to highlight a number of Land O'Lakes 1998 growth initiatives, including:

• a July 1 merger with California-based Dairyman's Cooperative Creamery Association, which brought new West Coast membership, 4 billion pounds of annual milk production and $6 million in additional earnings into the Land O'Lakes system.

• the acquisition of the feed, seed and agronomy assets of Countrymark Cooperative, expanding Land O'Lakes membership area to the Eastern Corn Belt and bringing approximately $800 million in Ag Services business into the system.

• the acquisition of Elm Grove Dairy, and the expansion of this facility into the manufacture of extended-shelf-life products;

• key ag services alliances with Illinois-based GROWMARK; and

• numerous seed acquisitions and joint ventures.

Land O'Lakes, Inc. is a national food and agricultural cooperative. It is a leading marketer of dairy products across the U.S.; serves international customers with a variety of food and animal feed products; and is owned by and provides family farmers and member cooperatives across the U.S. with an extensive line of feed, seed, plant food and crop protection products.

Pa. Pork Council Proposes National Moratorium

According to Mikesell, three delegates from Pennsylvania will be attending the national forum in Nashville next week. If NPPC passes the resolution, they must also come up with a way to try to fulfill the outline of the proposal.

There are 72 resolutions going before NPPC this year, not counting the moratorium resolution, according to Mikesell.

If the resolution passes, according to the senior extension associate, it "could open up a can of worms," he said. While it could help reduce the oversupply of hogs on market and "bring things back into equilibrium," he said, the effect on packers and processors could be detrimental.

For one thing, processors who are considering adding retention facilities for additional swine may have to reconsider plans.

But Hershey noted there are no plans to build any new slaughter plants anywhere in the country or additions to any existing facilities. "There are no plans whatsoever to build slaughter capacity," he said.

Hog farmers, according to swine industry experts who spoke at recent producer meetings, are in a situation of grave desperation.

The resolution may help some recover from the "devastating year of 1998," noted Hershey. The "time out" will help resolve "numerous environmental issues in our state and nation, slow down the neck-breaking speed of integration, ensure a normal live hog market cycle (highs equal to the lows), and re-think what direction this industry wants to go," Hershey noted in a Feb. 22 brief to PPPC board members.

Hershey noted that when the NPPC dedicates an entire section of a Web page to the market crisis, "we have a problem here," he said. "The industry is in a flux." So far, Hershey said, there has been more support, by far, than opposition by producers to the proposal.

North Carolina is a state which adopted a similar moratorium, this based on environmental concerns from a huge lagoon spill a few years ago. According to Walter Cherry, executive director of the North Carolina Pork Producers Council in Raleigh, state legislature began enforcing a two-year moratorium on all swine construction because of environmental concerns on March 1, 1997, which has been extended until Oct. 1 this year — more than the original two-year plan.

What has happened? According to Cherry, "we're basically full in terms of kill capacity," he said, and a lot of hogs are being shipped to 17 other states.

"Not many farmers want to expand when hogs are 25 cents a pound in this market," he said.

Producers were losing about $30 per head of hog in the midst of the fallout in December. There are three packers in North Carolina, including Hatfield, Lundy, and Smithfield, and "all are running full," he said. "There's no additional kill space."

About five million market hogs are shipped to South Dakota and Texas and other states to be processed. An additional 2.7 million feeder hogs are shipped to 23 or 24 other states to be finished.

In North Carolina, there are more than one million sows and about 2,500 hog producers in the state.

The moratorium in place in North Carolina won't apply to producers who can come up with a way to use alternate waste treatment systems — not those using conventional lagoon or spray-field systems.

On a curious note, Cherry said that in 1998, there were 41 spills, officially, from animal operations, including dairy, poultry, beef, and hog farms in North Carolina. Farms are inspected twice per year. There were 5,988 inspections of farms in 1998.

However, there were more than 3,400 spills from municipal waste treatment facilities the same year.

As for the ongoing moratorium, Cherry has one caution. He said, "You have to be real careful, if you're a producer, of what you'll agree to. It's the least you will get." The moratorium in the state was supposed to expire last fall, but has been extended.

He said, "I don't know whether the moratorium will ever be lifted."

1999 PROPOSED RESOLUTION

|---|---|
| KEY RESULT AREA | Public Policy |
| RESOLUTION NUMBER | |
| SUBMITTED BY | Pennsylvania Pork Producers Association |
| SUBJECT MATTER | Construction Moratorium |

MOTION: That NPPC ask USDA Secretary Glickman to impose a national moratorium on construction of new sow farms for the period of one (1) year.

* * * * * * * * * * * * *

Pennsylvania Pork Producers Association Rationale

1 The USDA has authorized direct payment of taxpayer dollars to pork producers Therefore, our industry should exercise self restraint of production

2 A one year moratorium would allow the industry

a to slow down consolidation and promote a more orderly transition of the industry

b to recover from the devastating losses of 1998

c time to resolve numerous environmental issues in the states, and nationally

d to evaluate the path to vertical integration upon which it has embarked

* * * * * * * * * * * * *

Discussion/Comments

A moratorium would help bring slaughter hog supply and packer demand back into equilibrium

The moratorium would encompass new construction of sow farms Expansion of existing farms, and construction of nursery and finishing barns would be exempt from this moratorium

Ten of 19 Pennsylvania Pork Producers board members voted to bring this resolution to the National Pork Forum

Dairyman To Dairyman

GEORGE CUDOC
PA DHIA
Consulting
Dairyman

QUESTION: Our somatic cell count keeps climbing and nothing seems to help. Where should we look for the problem?

ANSWER: This question came in not long ago from a dairy producer who is trying to expand his herd from a very good heifer calf crop over the last several years.

The cows are not becoming ill, but there is a loss of premiums paid by the dairy for good quality milk.

Expansion in this family farm seems to have a price tag associated with it that was not anticipated by the owners. Pa.DHIA somatic cell records were used to see if there is a trend that might lead us to a solution.

It should be noted that there has been a steady upward trend in the somatic cell count over the last 12 tests. This can be seen by the graphic representation of SCC on the "SCC Management Report."

Over the past year, the linear SCC has gone from 3.8 to 4.9, which is more than a doubling of total cells.

A second trend was evident as we studied that same report. Currently there a high number of first lactation animals being milked.

This is not unusual considering the growth mode in herd numbers. What is unusual is that 18 of 36 of these animals are infected as indicated by a code 4 or higher.

Looking over past records we see that this 50 percent infection rate has increased drastically over the last year where we saw as little as a 6-percent infection rate in first lactation.

At the same time, the new cows in the herd had increasing incidences of infection, the older cows were staying the same.

We now have a place to begin looking for the problem. Is the problem with the heifers occurring before they freshened or after?

Next, we need to look at trends in the first lactation pertaining to infection status as they proceed into and through lactation.

Without exception, the first lactation animals with new infections are during the first 100 days in milk. Furthermore, there seems to be no pattern of infection at zero to 30 days in milk.

Even distribution during the first 100 days-in-milk (DIM) tells us heifers are not infected at calving, but become so afterward.

We could prove this by milk culturing these heifers just before, or right after, freshening.

My visit to the farm was geared toward looking for problems with these young cows after they freshened.

As we walked through the facility, we saw several cows lying in the alley adjacent to the door. There were stalls to use, but not by these girls.

The main free stall barn appeared to have clean, dry, comfortable, stalls with many cows using them.

Another portion of the barn was an add-on facility that was intended to handle the rising population in the herd. The trouble was that this part of the barn did not address the same comfort issues that are important to cattle.

The dairyman had not thought about it at the time, but for the most part, the older and more dominant cows ruled the area of the barn that was comfortable.

The rest of the barn was left to the young, more recently fresh heifers.

A large number of these first lactation heifers had manure caked on their flanks, legs, bellies, and, yes, udders.

Here is a prime example of how to use your records to pinpoint problem areas in your herd that can be easily overlooked.

Certainly not every high SCC heifer was an alley-layer, but as we looked at individual cow SCC, 82 percent of the problem animals showed signs of laying in areas that weren't planned.

Not only do cows tells us about the holes in our management plans but often times they will tell us what can be done to become a better landlord.

These girls will pay the rent if it is a fit place to live.

Dairylea CEO: Dairy Farming Has A Future

MORRISVILLE, N.Y. — Dairylea Cooperative Chief Executive Officer Rick Smith spoke to the more than 30 members of SUNY Morrisville's Dairy Club at the college recently, giving them insight into the future of dairy farming, and agriculture in general.

"In terms of careers in dairy and agriculture, the opportunities are immense," Smith said. "We need more young people coming up in agriculture, as well as in areas that touch and support agriculture."

Smith discussed how Dairylea — through its subsidiary, Agri-Services, LLC — is providing farmers with an ever-expanding array of services that goes far beyond the marketing of milk.

"We are providing services related to computers and lab testing, insurance, investing, lending and leasing, as well as the purchasing of inputs and supplies," he said. "There is a tremendous future in agriculture for people who are getting into these areas."

According to Smith, there is substantial change occurring in the dairy industry, as a result of mergers and acquisitions. Yet, he reassured the students that that does not equal less opportunities for the future.

"We see mergers and acquisitions almost on a weekly basis. There is fewer of everything and everything left is bigger. Yet, if you were to graduate and start up a dairy farm down the road here, within a week you'd have 10 companies calling you to buy what you make. That's pretty good. There aren't too many industries where you can get out of college, start up your own business, and already have several companies waiting to buy your product," he said.

Smith said that the promising future of dairy and agriculture in the Northeast is evidenced by the strong agricultural infrastructure in the region, which in turn has brought many national and international dairy companies to invest and operate within the region.

"Why are huge processing companies like Bols Wessanen, Nestle, Valio, and Besnier so largely invested here in the Northeast? Because of the growth potential here, our access to a large international customer base, and the land and resources that we have. They have realized that there is tremendous value here they can't get anywhere else," he said.

Smith also encouraged the students by explaining that those who choose to be involved in production agriculture can have a better quality of life than previous generations on the farm. By specializing in one area, Smith said, farmers can do what they enjoy most and get some time off in the process.

"It used to be that Mom and Dad did everything. But going forward, farmers should think more about specializing, and joining forces with other farmers for the betterment of both parties. Some people are better at some things than others. Why not let someone else worry about the crops while you take care of the herd, if that's what you enjoy most," Smith said.

In addition, Smith also explained that by expanding an operation, and finding good employees to be part of the farm team, farmers can have more flexibility and have the opportunity for more time off the farm.

In closing, Smith commended programs such as SUNY Morrisville's Dairy Club and Cornell University's Dairy Fellows.

"This Dairy Club and the Dairy Fellows are wonderful programs. They expose you to more of what is out there — and the more you're exposed to, the better you'll do," said Smith.

Culling and Selling Dairy Cattle - Article 37

When selling cattle, some goals might be to maximize the market value of cattle that leave the farm, to retain good genetics in the herd, to give selected cows the opportunity to have several profit making lactations in their lifetime before selling them, and to have the opportunity to decide which cows to keep and which ones to sell voluntarily

Voluntary removal of cattle can boost farm profits several ways

1 Cows can be merchandised at higher prices for dairy purposes and thus improve farm income

2 The herd can be upgraded by selectively removing less profitable cows Some of these may not be good enough for your herd, but they may be useful to someone else and worth more than cull value

3 Voluntary culling is management driven, not problem driven

Involuntary culling reduces business profits

1 Involuntary culling is problem driven, not management driven

2 Problems, not genetics, dictate which cows have to be culled from the herd, and many times they may represent some of your better genetics

3 They have fewer profitable lactations in the herd because their useful life has been shortened If it takes a cow almost 2 years to recover her rearing costs up to time of first calving, and if she is culled after only two or three lactations she may have had only one profitable lactation in her life If she stays in the herd one year longer her lifetime profits double!

4 Problem cows have less sale value

Costs associated with culling

1 If replacements cost $1200 and the average sale value of all milking aged cows that left the herd (culled, dead or merchandised) is $400, the net cost of each replacement is $800

- Every time a cow is culled, based on the above figures, you lose $800! How many times can you afford to blow away $800?
- Table 1 shows the impact this has on cost per cow and per cwt of milk When the net cost of replacements is $800, replacement cost per cow per year drops from $264 down to $200 when cull rates drop from 33% down to 25% That's a savings of $0 36 per cwt of milk when production averages 18,000 lb per cow per year
- Costs also drop when replacement costs drop or when the sale value of cattle that leave the farm can be increased, as can be seen in Table 1

Table 1 Impact of Culling Rates and Cow Prices on Replacement Costs

| Replace Cost | | Sale Value | | Net Cost | | Cull Rate | | Cost per Cow / Yr. | | Cwt Milk / Cow | | Cost / Cwt. |

tence during 1996, but it was enforced during the last six months of 1997.

The information also illustrated that 46 million have been returned to dairy farmers since the Compact started to establish a price for Class I milk.

Tewksbury said that in addition to the economic conditions that are facing our dairy farmers, another important reason for the need of a Compact is the disparity in the value of Class I milk (fluid) in various areas.

For instance, in January of 1998 the Compact price for Class I milk (fluid) was $16.94 per cwt. northern Pennsylvania prices established by the Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board was $16.73. However, in Federal Order No. 2 (N.Y., N.J. Market) the price was $15.38.

Tewksbury said this illustration would hold true in other Federal Orders.

When the U.S. Congress authorized the Compact, they authorized the existing states that comprised the Compact, which were the New England States.

In addition, they authorized the states of New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland and Virginia to Join the Compact after each of the states' assemblies passed the needed legislation.

Pennsylvania and Delaware are the only states left to pass the legislation.

In the Pennsylvania Senate, Sen. Roger Madigan (R. Bradford County) has introduced S Bill 365 to included Pennsylvania in the Compact. In the House, Rep. Sandra Majors (R. Susquehanna) has introduced H. B 170 and Rep. Thomas Scrimenti (D. Warren County) has introduced H B 193.

All three bills contain the needed legislation which will allow Pennsylvania to join the Compact.

Tewksbury concluded by saying, "with the anticipated sharp decline in prices paid to dairy farmers, there is a clear need to pass the Compact Bill as soon as possible.

Northeast Dairy Project Wins Award For Agricultural Research Excellence

COLLEGE, Md. – A team of 19 Northeast region land-grant university scientists — representing a wide array of disciplines recently won an award for research excellence in developing a model that may change the way dairy farm nutrient pollution is managed.

The dairy farm system model is to help farmers manage their dairy herds in a cost-effective way that also is friendly to the environment and consistent with new farming regulations.

The Northeastern Regional Association of State Agricultural Experiment Station Directors (NERA) presented its Award for Excellence to the team during its annual NERA winter meeting, held jointly with Northeast Extension Directors at the Venue-State Plaza Hotel in Washington, D.C.

The multi-state research project is titled "Environmental and Economic Impacts of Nutrient Management on Dairy Forage systems (NE-132). Its members collaborated with three scientists in the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Agricultural Research Service to address the issue of how to enable dairy farmers to stay in business and at the same time comply with tough and costly environmental laws aimed at reducing nutrient pollution associated with milk production-especially nitrogen.

The team found that nutrient cycling in dairy herds depends essentially on how cows are treated. Factors affecting the nutrient content of urine and manure include supplemental lighting in dairy barns, type of fertilizer applied to dairy feed crops, a cow's chewing time, the way cows are grouped for feeding, number of daily milkings - even use of mobile feeders.

The scientists studied a number of variables and constructed a nutrient balance sheet to reflect the origin of the nutrients, where the nutrients are needed, where they end up, how to stop them from ending up in the wrong place, and cost of the remedy.

After determining herd responses to various grazing management strategies, the researchers created a dairy farm system (DAFOSYM) computer model for calculating the flow of nutrients, especially for small to medium-sized dairy farms.

The computer program shows the costs and profits associated with specific farm management options. Calculated values were then verified through farm-level monitoring.

Protect scientists now are converting their computer code into a version more suitable for Cooperative Extension county agents/educators to use in advising dairy farmers about nutrient management options. And validation continues.

The USDA's Agricultural Research Service has purchased a real-scale dairy farm in Franklin County, Pa., to study nutrient management strategies.

Collaborations with the land-grant university researchers will continue in this new setting. The project's DAFOSYM computer model will be an important part of that research.

The World Wide Web In Education

Daniel R. Deaver, Ph.D.

Every day we see references to the World Wide Web, or WWW, and its potential to impact our lives. Major TV networks, newspapers, retail stores, movies, entertainers, sports teams, large and small businesses, and, of course, universities have a presence on the Web. The Department of Dairy and Animal Science recognized the importance of the Internet early in its development, and was one of the first departments in the University to hire a person dedicated to maintaining and enhancing our networks and connection to the world through the Internet. Because of this, we have been able to take advantage of our physical and technical infrastructure to develop impressive new tools for the classroom.

Faculty face a number of challenges, including how to provide current information, interact with large numbers of students, and help students self-evaluate their progress prior to exams. Having information and learning tools available 24 hours a day is a distinct advantage.

Over the past nine months, the Department has developed software that allows faculty to make a variety of different materials available to students over the Internet. The development team included three faculty in Dairy and Animal Science (Dan Deaver, Lisa Holden and Dale Over) and two exceptional programmers (Craig Benner and Rob Walker - also undergraduate students). Each faculty member of the team teaches different types of courses in terms of class size and level. A major objective was to develop a single versatile package that could be utilized for many different courses, and to have the material accessible to faculty and students from literally anywhere in the world. Finally, to increase it potential acceptability by both students and instructors we sought to make the program easy to use.

The program is called CourseSTAR, and was tested last fall in ANSC 431W - Physiology of Reproduction in Farm Animals. Students' responses to the software were very positive. They were able to obtain supplemental notes, copies of graphics used in lecture, and access to laboratory materials. They even took several quizzes that were immediately graded by the computer and returned. In the past, the laboratories were opened several nights before each laboratory practical. However as class size increased, from 20 students in 1990 to 88 students in 1998, this optional study time became difficult to manage. This year, CourseSTAR provided images of reproductive tracts, available for students to review from any location 24 hours a day!

CourseSTAR will be expanded dramatically in the coming year. The software will be available to any instructor at the University Park campus who would like to use it. In a survey, students who used CourseSTAR said they would like to see more courses using it, and they felt CourseSTAR was better than other software they had used designed to accomplish similar goals.

There is an important distinction between teaching and information transfer. Software like CourseSTAR does not teach. The art of teaching will continue to be highly personalized and instructor dependent. In many ways CourseStar is similar to good management tools used by progressive livestock producers. It is of great benefit in providing up-to-date information and material to students. In order to reap the benefits of this technology, it will need to be used correctly. Computer technologies are here to stay. Incorporation of computer technologies into many of our courses will help develop and re-enforce critical life skills in our students.

We invite you to sample the ANSC 431W materials on CourseSTAR. Not all options may be available to you as a visitor (like the quizzes) but you will be able to gain a sense of what the technology can provide students. You can access the site from the Dairy and Animal Science homepage (http://www.das.psu.edu/) and follow the link to CourseStar. For UserName enter LanFarm and use DAS4U as the password. Then follow the link to ANSC 431W materials. Your comments and suggestions are welcomed!

National Dairy Production Program

BRATTLEBORO, Vt. — In a recent AP wire story it was reported that a Holstein cow named LA-Foster Blstar Lucy 607, registration number 14599252, set a new world milk production record by producing 75,275 pounds of milk in a 365-day period.

The Holstein Association USA is the national breed organization whose Production Leader Program designates official, national and state breed leading records. In the instance of Lucy the lactation record begun on December 12, 1997 and completed Decemeber 11, 1998, does not meet the Production Leader requirements set by the Holstein Association. While the data collection procedures appear to meet the basic conditions required for publication by the Holstein Association, they do not meet the current, more stringent requirements required for official recognition as a Production Leader.

In 1997, the organization responsible for the collection of dairy production records, Dairy Herd Improvement Association (DHIA), underwent a change in their approach to meeting the information needs of the U.S. dairy industry. One of the changes was the movement from rule enforcement to procedures that provide data collection information. This shifted much of the responsibility for determining the value and use of records to member producers and industry allies.

As a result, Holstein Association USA, created revised procedures to determine the eligibility of animals to participate in Official Recognition Programs. In order for a Holstein cow to be recognized as a Production Leader the herd owner must be enrolled in the Association's Premier TriStar production records program service option. In this system, eligibility is based on the completeness, supervision, and verification of lactation records.

Good Calf Quality

more feed for a beef animal to gain a pound of fat than to gain a pound of muscle (lean).

Continuing to produce unwanted beef animals for the market not only costs the producer more money, but it costs the processors more money, and it can be expected that increased industry competitiveness won't tolerate unnecessary expenses.

Cash said that EPDs work well in predicting marbeling, especially when compared to the fact that there has been shown to be no significant relationship between extramuscular fat and marbeling.

Marbeling provides flavor and moistness of meat; genetics and especially maturity determines tenderness.

"Can we produce leaner beef with higher marbeling? You betcha," Cash said.

He said that those looking to buy calves to feed out should ask for the carcass EPDs on the sire of the calves. If the seller doesn't know, the calves don't have as much value.

Further, he suggested that those who raise calves with known pedigrees and selected matings based on desirable EPDs may want to avoid marketing them in situations where those calves get thrown in with calves of unknown quality.

"The sorry cattle are pulling the good ones down," he said.

Farm To Supermarket Care Needed

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — Even in a high-tech age of rapidly expanding consumer choices for dairy products — including high temperature-short time (HTST) pasteurized milk-dairy processors still need to be mindful of old-fashioned basics in "Optimizing the Shelf Life of Fluid Milk."

That was the handle for the inaugural C. Walter England Dairy Technology Lectureship presented in late 1998 during an HTST Pasteurizer Short Course at the University of Maryland.

The guest lecturer was John E. Rushing, professor of food science and internationally known Extension dairy processing specialist at North Carolina State University.

Dr. Rushing declared there is no simple recipe for achieving optimum shelf life. Rather, the key lies in a combination of factors from farm to supermarket. On-farm factors include:

- Top quality milk produced by healthy, properly fed and well-managed cows;
- Clean and sanitary equipment and environment;
- Proper cow preparation and milking procedures;
- Clean and healthy personnel;
- Proper pumping and immediate refrigeration, with pasteurization as soon as possible.

Why stress on-farm factors?

Organisms that survive pasteurization are an indication of poor farm conditions.

Many flavor and fat-related problems often find their origin on the farm. Thermoduric organisms can be introduced that will grow in long-shelf-life milks. This can result in malty and ropy problems.

Dairy plant managers also pay an important role in the shelf-life picture, Rushing noted. They need to pay attention to these procedures:

- Isolate the filler and control the filler environment;
- Filter air into silos and protect from sprays and aerosols;
- Package milk immediately and protect packaging;
- Develop a sanitation monitoring program;
- Keep milk products cold (32-36 F), move immediately, train truck drivers and store personnel.

In conclusion, Rushing presented this take-home message: "Pasteurization destroys spoilage organisms; keeping milk clean and cold reduces spoilage organisms.

You can't make good milk from bad."

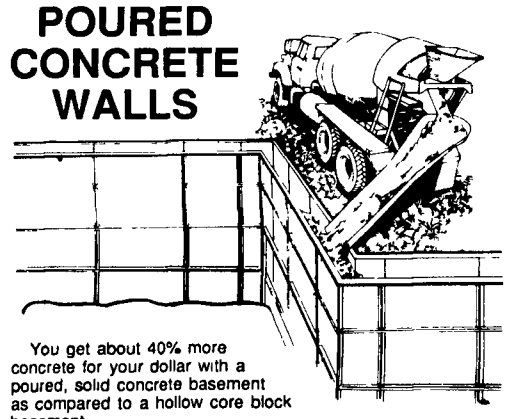
START WITH THE BEST!
POURED CONCRETE WALLS



You get about 40% more concrete for your dollar with a poured, solid concrete basement as compared to a hollow core block basement

A poured solid concrete basement weighs about 50 lbs more per cubic foot! Far denser What's more, poured solid concrete walls are monolithic there are no joints!

This is why laboratory tests show poured, solid concrete basements have many times the flexural and compressive strength to withstand the side and down pressures caused by earth, wind, water and building loads and the material density to resist water penetration

Best of all, thanks to modern and efficient construction techniques, poured, solid concrete basements are competitively priced

Tasty Spuds

"Some cultivars of potatoes taste better than others," said Winston Bash, director of Ohio State University's Food Industries Center. And he has the research to prove it.

For the past two years, Bash and his colleagues have boiled, fried, mashed, and baked potatoes.

Fourteen different varieties that appeared to have good characteristics were used. Each was sliced to equal thickness, cooked at the same temperature, and for the same amount of time.

The difference was stunning. Every cultivar had a different flavor—some desirable; some not. Some potatoes maintained good texture, while others got pasty when mashed. Others had enough sugar to turn golden brown as they fry; others stay white.

Some potatoes scored well when prepared as baked potatoes but did poorly when mashed.

The results of these are not released to the public, but it explains why potatoes, made the same way, may taste wonderful one time, and the next, seem to taste mundane.

Nonetheless, potatoes offer wonderful possibilities for every meal. Try these from our readers.

Skinny On Potatoes

Everyone agrees that potatoes taste good. But just how good are they for you?

One medium potato has just 100 calories, zero fat and cholesterol and 26 grams complex carbohydrates, the body's main source of fuel. In addition, one potato provides 40 percent of the Recommended Daily Allowance of vitamin C.

Don't forget crockpot recipes when preparing potatoes. This Sausage Sauerkraut Supper was prepared by Susan Fisher during the Pork Workshop Extravaganza.

SAUSAGE SAUERKRAUT SUPPER

4 cups carrot chunks (2-inch pieces)
4 cups red potato chunks
2 14-ounce cans sauerkraut, rinsed and drained
2½ pounds fresh Polish sausage, cut into 3-inch pieces
1 medium onion, thinly sliced
3 garlic cloves, minced
3 cups chicken broth
1 teaspoon pepper
½ teaspoon caraway seed

In 5-quart slow cooker, layer carrots, potatoes, and sauerkraut. In a skillet, brown the sausage; transfer to slow cooker. Reserve 1 tablespoons drippings in skillet, saute onion and garlic until tender. Gradually add broth. Bring to a boil; stir to loosen browned bits. Stir in pepper and caraway. Pour over sausage. Cover and cook on low for 8-9 hours or until vegetables are tender and sausage is no longer pink. Yield: 10-12 servings.

Featured Recipe

If the need to serve good food fast sends you scurrying to the nearest take-out restaurant, think again. You can throw together a delicious meal using fresh, wholesome ingredients and have dinner on the table in a half hour.

Just start with Amerinca's favorite vegetable—the potato—as a base, and master these five time-saving techniques. Soon you'll find there's no limit to how you can toss, top or transform a potato. Before you know it, you'll be doing dinner a whole new way!

- Micro-baked — Use the microwave oven to bake whole potatoes, then make a delicious topping for a satisfying meal-in-one.
- One-pan — Cut up potatoes and microwave briefly. Saute with meat or poultry and a prepared sauce, all in one pan.
- Pouch potatoes — Remember those campfire meals you made as a kid, grilling food in foil packets? Try it at home in the kitchen oven—but with greater style and flair.
- Micro-mashed — Use trendy mashed potatoes as a "bed" for sauced meat dishes. The microwave oven simplifies the mashed potato preparation.
- Processed — Processed potatoes give a jump start on more elaborate and time-consuming recipes. Use them to create classic one-dish meals such as in potato casseroles or experiment with the combinations on your own.

AITC TIMBER — "The Symbol of Quality In Engineered Timber"

Over 40 Years of Quality Service

With the beginning of Lent, you will notice an abundance of finfish and shellfish in the seafood case of the supermarket. There are more than 400 marketable species in the United States, so there are many choices to fit your palate and your pocketbook.

Be experimental and try different varieties of seafood in soups, stew, chowders, casseroles, and other specialty dishes such as paella.

Finfish can be prepared in a number of different ways such as baking, microwaving, and broiling.

Broiling is a simple, quick way to bring out the true flavor of fish. It's so easy to brush a fillet lightly with olive oil or melted butter, sprinkle a bit of salt and freshly ground black pepper, and slide it under the broiler for a few minutes.

As with all seafood, avoid overcooking. Since you're using intense, dry heat, cooking time is brief. Fish should be moist when done. Remember that the fish continues to cook a bit after removal from the oven. If slightly translucent in the middle, your fish will finish cooking after you take it out.

It's best to broil pieces that are at least three-fourths inch thick. But if you're careful, you can successfully cook thinner fish. You can dust the tops with flour or crumbs for easier browning.

Cook only until golden or lightly browned. Test for doneness with the tip of a sharp knife or with a fork. The fish should flake easily when tested.

Some seafood chefs say that you should never use paprika when broiling, if you're using it as a substitute for browning. However, when used for flavor and color, it should be added before the cooking time ends. Don't let it burn or it will taste bitter.

A widely used method of seafood cooking is the Canadian Theory. This calls for cooking fish at high temperatures for ten minutes per inch of thickness, measured at its thickest part. If you use this method, check the fish before the end of the cooking time since temperatures are not always exact.

Most recipes specify broiling four to six inches from heat source, four inches being the most common. Remember that the thicker the fish, the greater the distance.

It isn't necessary to turn fish when broiling unless the pieces are very thick. Steaks, such as salmon or swordfish may be browned on one side, then turned.

Most chefs say that basting is essential when broiling, but if you're cooking thin pieces, you may find that a generous brushing lightly with margarine or olive oil before cooking is enough. Lean fish generally requires some basting. Fatty fish require less.

Marinades give added flavors to broiling seafood. Marinades for fatty fish need little or no oil, while those for lean fish need more. Always broil with the skin side down so that you are basting the flesh side.

Most experts advise preheating an electric broiler for at least ten minutes. Many suggest heating the broiler rack too. When heated, brush the rack with vegetable oil. Preheating helps in cooking and will slightly brown the underside of the fish.

Broiling and grilling are basically the same method, both use dry, intense heat. The only difference is that in broiling the heat is above the food while in grilling it is below it. You can substitute recipes for grilling and vice versa.

No matter which method you use to prepare fish, you and your family will benefit from nutritious, delicious, easy to prepare seafood, that is very economical with stores offering "specials" during this time of year.

The Well-Kept Spud

- Store potatoes in a cool, dark place that is well ventilated. The ideal storage temperature is 45-50 degrees Fahrenheit.
- DO NOT refrigerate potatoes. Potatoes stored below 40 degrees Fahrenheit will develop a sweet taste, the result of an accumulation of sugars in the flesh of the potato. This increased accumulation of sugar will cause the potato to darken when cooked.
- Wash potatoes carefully, and scrub gently with a vegetable brush if cooking with skins on.

"Mom, why is there salt in the bathroom closet?"

That question jumped out of the recesses of my mind a few days ago, as I rummaged through the closet hunting some duct tape, and had to move the bulky salt bag.

Home on one of their rare visits from the west coast some months ago, our daughter and family had found the salt stash while searching for some household tool.

And, why would the duct tape be in the bathroom closet," might be a logical, followup query.

That one's easy. In an old house, which originally had virtually no closets and even today had only limited storage space, you stash stuff wherever room is available. Thus, the lower shelf of our narrow bathroom closet holds assorted household tools, including some heavy-duty duct tape. Also in this miscellaneous tools stash is a bag of coarse salt for use on the front walk when it becomes icy. With the mild winter, the salt is mostly just in the way in the closet this year.

But moving the salt to find the duct tape set me to thinking. I don't know about other people's houses, but in ours, all sorts of ordinary household materials can be found in unlikely places.

And some of the-believe it or not-are in those locations by intent.

Like the can of hairspray kept on a shelf above the washing machine. I rarely use the stuff myself, since lots of scented and artificially colored cosmetic products give me an itchy, red-splotched skin rash. But hairspray is a great laundry aid for removing those lines of ballpoint pen which sometimes get accidentally written across fabric.

For a similar reason, you'll find the powdered orange drink mix handy to the dishwasher. Tha't because, of the advice of our appliance repairman, I periodically run a cup of so of it through a cycle to dissolve the dark mineral deposits, which buil up on the interior surface.

With no children in the house, hauling disease bugs home from school on a regular basis, we catch few colds. But when we do, we fall back for some nighttime, head-stuffiness relieve on a tried-and-true remedy; Vicks Vaporub. Except, since it's so rarely needed in the house, we may have to hunt high and low to find it. Especially since the little blue jar of pungent ointment is likely to be found in the calf barn.

The Farmer occationally utilizes it for a baby calf battling human-like cold symptoms. The head-opening vapors offer a little temporary bovine breathing relıefe while a stronger medication battles the bad bugs. I try to keep an extra little jar of the stuff at the barn just for that purpose, but the household one still "gets legs" and walks away, sometimes.

For similar reasons, a giant-sized container of generic instant coffee is kept on hand with other miscellaneous cattle supplies. A jar of the coffee granules mixed with hot water and administered to the cow in a drench is sometimes effective in relieving certain digestive problems in cows. (With four stomachs, a cow can get some pretty serious digestive upsets.) A jar of instant coffe has been an on-farm vet staple here since a veterinarian recommended it years ago.

We even have foods stored in what might be considered as stange places, like the stairwell to our unheated upstairs. This is a handy place over the winter to store small amounts of extra fruit. Oranges, grapefruits, and apples hold well there so long as the weather outside is cold. By the time nature has warmed up the outside, the fruit stash is down to a volume which can be wedge into either the house or barn refrigerator. Yes, the ground cellar would work as well, but it's handier to have them just behind the upstairs door.

Likewise, a bag of onions is often held ın the cool dryness of the stairwell. And, extra bananas keep there as well, without getting overripe too quickly.

From the empty plastic pop bottles in the barn closet (for freezing colostrum to feed calves) to the plastic-bag-encased washcloth in the refrigerator (frozen for emergency icepack), 30 years of farm living has equipped our household for just about any contingency.

But it helps if you know where to find the stuff when you need it.

Dietrich's Meats Sells Fresh From The Farm

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

KRUMSVILLE (Berks Co.) — Perhaps pickled goose gizzards, pig snouts, and liver pudding are not on your repertoire of foods you eat, but old-fashioned smoked meats without chemicals and hundreds of other mouth-savoring items are impossible to resist when you visit Dietrich's Meats.

Open the door to the market and one whiff of the wonderful meats and a quick glance at the meat counter, and you know that this meat is the best you can find.

"All meat is direct from the farm," said Verna Dietrich, matriarch of Dietrich's Meats in Krumsville.

Verna's husband Willard and their eldest son run the farm operation located on Willard's homestead, about five miles from the store. About 700 acres are used for cattle grazing and crops to feed the livestock raised for butchering. And this means more than beef. Goats, lamb, rabbits, and hogs, are also raised on the family farm in order to replenish the store supply.

"We have our own butcher shop and make everything ourselves," Verna said of the extensive list of foods available at their country store.

Sons Lynn and Marlin take charge of the slaughterhouse. Kill is done under USDA inspection on one to two days weekly. The remainder of the time the sons keep busy producing delicacies such as Mettwurst, Jagdwurst, Braunschweiger, Speckwurst, souse, tripe, kielbasa. . . . The list is never ending with basics such as freshly smoked hams, bacon, bolognas, and grain-fed beef.

Son Lynn, his wife Debbie, and their five children, and another son Marlin, his wife Dawn, and their three children work in the store and butcher shop from sunup to sundown and then some.

The story is told that 22 years ago, the family decided to stop milking and open a butchering shop in order to diversify the operation. The family found its niche in producing specialty meats.

Verna Dietrich holds up some of the family's homemade bologna. Dietrichs make 60 varieties of processed products such as kielbasa, beef sticks, beef jerky, dried beef, Mettwurst, Jagdwurst. . . .

Homestead Notes

The full-line of poultry products includes smoked and fresh turkeys, chickens, ducks, geese, pheasants, cornish hens, chukar, partridges, quail, squabs, muscovy ducks and even chicken feet.

"We have 60 varieties of all-meet processed products that we make, like ring bologna, kielbasa, beef sticks, Old Smokie sticks, beef jerky, dried beef, hot dogs, and head cheese," Dawn said.

Free samples of many of these meats are offered to customers daily.

"We use all natural casings—no plastic or artificial additives in anything," said Dawn.

About the only thing the family orders premade is lamb's tongue. "Because you get only one tongue to a lamb and we only butcher one or two weekly, we need to order additional tongues," Verna explained.

Ethnic groups can always find what they are looking for. "If someone asks for it, we make it," Verna said. She said that they develop their own recipes and change it until the product tastes "right" to the customer.

About 15 years ago a bakery was added on the premises. Debbie oversees the baking. The bakery items are also reminiscent of days gone by. Funeral pie, strawberry-rhubarb, lemon sponge, wet bottom shoo-fly, funny cake, montgomery pie, mincemeat pie, and AP cakes are some of the standard offerings.

Theoretically, Dawn is in charge of the store and bookkeeping; Debbie, the bakery, and Verna oversees everything, but, "If you see something that needs done—you do it," Verna said of the family's unwritten philosopy. "If red beets need to be pickled, we just do it."

Hickory nuts, dried snitz, canned pickles, red beet horseradish, corn relish, chow chow, pickled artichokes, grape butter, jellies, jams, dried meadow tea, and even dried string beans are some other Pennsylvania Dutch specialties they sell.

The uniqueness of the place seems unending. During a recent tour, Verna keeps pointing with pride to the varied items the family business offers. "We make sauerkraut the old-fashioned way—in crocks. You don't hear of other stores doing that."

Or, "We render our own lard." Or, "We let our beef hang in the coolers two weeks to age. It's more tender that way."

Mettwurst, knockwurst. . .whatever foods people remember from childhood, and some things that they don't remember, are packed into corners of the country store.

The store does very little wholesaling but sells all the meats through their store and at Renningers Farmers Market, open Friday

(Turn to Page B7)

Dawn Dietrich refills a tray with the family's farm-raised beef cuts.

Pork hams, turkey hams, sausages in many flavors, and ring bologna are a few of the smoked items offered. Dean Dietrich is one of the eight grandchildren who work at the store during off-school hours.

Lemon sponge, wet bottom shoo-fly, mincemeat, chocolate shoo-fly pies, funny cake, and many other old Pennsylvania Dutch favorites are baked daily by Debbie Dietrich.

Customer Herbie Brandt purchases items he can't find elsewhere from Jessica Reimert, one of several employees in addition to the Dietrich family.

A Silence that Scars

I spent some time recently talking with a local high school guidance counselor, and she was relaying to me some of the situations she deals with on an everyday basis. One that seemed particularly sad to me was her description of parents who give children the "silent treatment."

Many of us are guilty of occasionally giving our peers (often our spouses) the silent treatment for an hour or two. I know I am. We shouldn't be proud of that. There are much healthier ways of resolving anger and conflicts, but using that same tactic to punish children is so hurtful.

This counselor told of parents not speaking with children for extended periods of time —not hours but rather days and weeks—because the child had broken a rule or disappointed the parent.

We parents are human, imperfect people. But I like to believe we are also teachable. Even if we haven't had good examples in our own childhood of how to handle anger and disappointment, we can show our children better methods of dealing with family struggles.

Remember that the goal of discipline is to help a child learn self control, not to punish. When parents feel hurt or disgusted, thinking "How could you do this to me?," and react by getting even, it sets up a cycle of intensified retaliation. "I'm so mad, I'm not ever going to talk to you again. I'm going to make you hurt like you hurt me."

The child is crushed but also feels angry and mirrors the behavior seen in the parent. "Well, this is the last time I tell you anything! I can't ever please you. I might as well stop trying."

The wall of anger and silence grows higher and higher.

Children need consequences for inappropriate behavior, but silence from a parent is not an appropriate consequence. That silence communicates pure rejection and isolation. No problems get solved in isolation.

Several better options for dealing with anger and frustration exist.

First, parents and children should cool down. It is okay to step into another room or go for a walk to collect your thoughts and vent some steam. But then start the communicating that it will take to repair the situation. Ask each person to share their feelings or their side of the story. Guaranteed there will be at least two interpretations of what happened!

Try the sentence, "I was very disappointed when you failed to complete your class report again this week." or "I was furious when I found out you had lied to me about where you had been Saturday night." Then invite the child's explanation. "I need to try to understand what's happening. Tell me what your thinking; tell me why you made that choice."

You may not like what you hear. You may not hear anything in response if your child is a typical, non-verbal teenager. You may receive anger from the child.

It is crucial to deliberately keep a calm, even voice. This tactic has an amazing way of diffusing the child's anger. Our brains have an unconscious response of "volume matching." When one person whispers, the other tends to match that volume with a whispered response. When one person yells,the other tends to respond in a matched, angry tone.

Remind the child of preestablished consequences or contracts that you have and enforce them when the rule is broken. If possible, allow the child to make amends. Give them a second (third or fourth) chance to do it right. This may be the best learning. What can they actively do to repair the situation?

On a daily basis, mention to your child things you like or admire about them - their comfortable way of talking with friends, the energy they have, their courage to take risks and try new things, their stick-to-itiveness, their flexibility. Find good things every day.

Children need rules, structure, expectations, and consequences from their parents. They need our supervision and our consistency. But most of all, our children need unconditional love from us. They need our strong spoken and unspoken messages of acceptance. Here are some of the messages your children may need to hear from you this week:

"I love you even when we differ."

"ALL your feelings are okay with me."

"You can find a way of doing things that works for you."

"My love is always with you. I trust you to ask for support when you need it."

"Your needs are important."

"You can develop our own interests and relationships."

If you find yourself tempted to give our child the silent treatment because you feel anger or disappointment, reach deep inside and gather the courage to express your own feelings in a calm way. Then take a risk and say, "I love you even when I feel angry, even when we differ."

and Saturday only. They also sell specialties at the Kutztown Pennsylvania German Festival held annually in June.

The store also offers a unique service. They process fish and wildgame that customers bring to them. "We have customers bring in game year-round because they go out west and Canada to hunt and bring us the meat to process any way they want it," Verna said.

Dietrich's Meats has been pictured in the New York Times, Vogue Magazine, and other national newspapers and books on food.

In addition to local clientel, the store is frequented by New York, New Jersey, and other out-of-state customers. Several large billboards along Interstate 78 broadcast Dietrich's Meats, but it's a place that must be experienced.

"We want to keep small but good," Verna said.

The store is open seven days a week. When asked what they do for relaxation, Verna said, "Our relaxation comes from having satisfied customers. We're unique and we want to keep it that way."

Dietrich's Meats, located on Rt. 737, Exit 12 on Interstate 78, is open Monday through Friday from 6 a.m. to 7 p.m., Saturday, from 6: a.m. to 6 p.m., and Sun. 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Mail orders are also welcome. Address is 660 Old 22, Lenhartsville, PA 19534.

Power Outages Can Lead To Food Safety Failures

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Weather, good or bad, is getting easier to track and predict, but the sometimes capricious effects of bad weather — stormy winds, torrential rains and lightening — can knock out a home's power supply for hours or days.

A Penn State Cooperative Extension and Outreach nutrition and food safety specialist says during emergencies, homeowners shouldn't be in the dark about food safety.

"When the power goes off for an hour or two, you don't have to worry about food safety," said Cathy Guffey, extension agent in Bradford County. "As long as you don't leave the freezer or refrigerator door open or open the door often, your food supply should be safe."

For longer outages, Guffey suggests some tips for the well-prepared homeowner.

• Thermometers. Buy thermometers for both the refrigerator and freezer so you can track the temperature. "Food will remain frozen in a full freezer for about two days," Guffey said. "A less crowded freezer may retain cold for about a day."

• Dry Ice. Adding dry ice to a freezer will stabilize temperatures from two to four days, depending on how full the freezer is. Guffey suggests 25 pounds for a 10-cubic-foot freezer "Never handle dry ice with your bare hands or breathe the fumes from it," she says. "Put it in a cardboard box to keep it away from the contents of the freezer."

• Block Ice. Guffey estimates that food will keep for four to six hours in a refrigerator. Chilled temperatures can be maintained by placing block ice in the refrigerator. To prevent dripping, put the block in a pan or watertight container.

Guffey says homeowners can easily check to see whether food should be thrown out or can be refrozen.

"If ice crystals are visible, and its temperature has not gone above 40 degrees Fahrenheit, it is safe to refreeze," Guffey said. "Discard any item with a strange odor or color. If the item has thawed completely but is still refrigerator cold, you can cook it and serve or refreeze the cooked dish."

If raw meat has thawed, in some cases it can be cooked as long as reaches the required cooking temperature and time to ensure doneness.

According to Steve Knabel, professor of food science, some foods are less tolerant of exposure to warming temperatures over time. Fresh meats, poultry, cold cuts, hot dogs, eggs, casseroles, creamy salad dressings, cookie dough and milk should be thrown out if subjected to temperatures higher than 40 degrees F for more than two hours.

Fruits, dried fruits, pasteurized fruit juices, flour, nuts and vegetables can be cooked or eaten raw provided there is no evidence of mold or a slimy feel Cheeses can be eaten if they have been well wrapped, and butter and margerine can be kept as well, Knabel said.

QUESTION — M. Martin, Ephrata, would like to know how to make tomato paste using 100-percent tomatoes.

QUESTION — Jack Hohmeier, Painter, Vir., wants to know how to actually can canned milk, not just duplicate for immediate use.

QUESTION — Bonnie Gibble, Ono, would like healthy recipes with nutritional counts.

4 quarts water
3 cups chopped celery

Beautiful Garden Without Work?

PHILADELPHIA — The EPA's exhibit, "The All-American Garden," at the 1999 Philadelphia Flower Show March 7 to 14 has been designed by a team of EPA employees to generate ideas and inspire gardeners to use native plants.

Native plants, which are indigenous to the area, will thrive with less care than exotic plants because they have already adapted to the climate and soil conditions. They will require less water, less pesticides, and a lot less work. Using local plants is called beneficial landscaping.

"The beauty of a beneficial landscape is that it saves time and money while treading more gently on the environment," said Jeff Lapp, an EPA wetlands enforcement coordinator and one of the developers of the exhibit.

Visitors to the exhibit will find a restful, woodland garden filled with coastal azalea, mountain andromeda, sheep laurel and many other plants, trees and shrubs native to the region. Such a landscape creates a wildlife habitat for birds and butterflies by providing food and water, shelter, and reproduction sites needed for their survival.

As usual, all the plants included in the exhibit have been grown by EPA employees and volunteers throughout the year. And after the flower show is over, everything will be donated to schools, zoos, parks and brownfield sites.

The exhibit has grown over the years since EPA first exhibited at the Philadelphia Flower Show in 1992 with just a table and employee volunteers handing out literature. Last year the EPA's exhibit, "The Nature of Diversity," took best of show for non-academic educational exhibits

Each year the EPA emphasizes beneficial landscaping because imported plants like Norway maple, Japanese honeysuckle, kudzu, purple loosestrife and crown vetch grow at such a rate that they can crowd out native vegetation. Unchecked, this could drastically reduce plant diversity and even lead to extinction of local species.

It is estimated that about 3,000 plant species in the U.S. today are not native to the area they inhabit — that's about 16 percent of the total flora.

"What we do in our own backyards has impacts often never imagined," Lapp said. "By adopting beneficial landscaping, we can achieve a safe and healthy environment and save money too."

Stop by the EPA's exhibit at the 1999 Philadelphia Flower Show. And don't forget to ask for your copy of "A Gardener's Guide to a Healthier Environment." Or contact the EPA's Public Environmental Education Center at 215-814-5662/5663 for your free copy.

Homework Pays Off With $100 Savings Bond

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

KRUMSVILLE (Berks Co.) — It pays to do your homework well.

It certainly paid well for Anson Dietrich. The 14-year-old recently received a $100 savings bond for a poem he wrote for a class assignment.

He and his FFA class at Kutztown High School were assigned to write an essay or do some type of artwork about Pennsylvania Ag for the Planet.

Anson decided to write a poem. He shrugs when asked how long it took to write the poem, but he did say he made a few revisions after he had written it.

His teacher selected his poem from all the poetry submitted and sent it to regional competition. Again Anson's poem was selected and sent on to state competition. A few days before the Pennsylvania Farm Show held during the second week of January, Anson was notified that his poem had been selected as the state winner in his age group.

"They had to tell me ahead of time to make sure I was there to read it and get the savings bond," Anson said.

This wasn't the first time Anson received recognition for a poetry project. When he was in fifth grade, he wrote a poem that was published in a book, "Colors of Nature."

"I think I get my talent from my mom," the shy ninth grader said. "And I had good elementary school teachers."

Anson's parents, Dawn and Marlin Dietrich, help farm and operate Dietrich's Meats in Krumsville.

Anson and Andrew, his twin brother who looks just like him, work at the butcher shop after school and on weekends.

Friends and teachers and even his parents can rarely figure out which twin is who. But their 16-year-old sister Emily cannot be fooled. She has the uncanny sense of even knowing who's who whether it's on the phone or in person.

Anson said there are good and bad things about having a twin who looks just like you.

"If one of us misbehaves, no one knows who did it, because they can't tell us apart. But if I forget my homework, my brother remembers it."

The poem was a project that Anson completed by himself. However, Andrew, and Emily worked together on a window display. Named "What's All the Buzzin?", the display told the story of how bees collect honey. The display won two first places and a second place before it was eligible for state competition, where it placed eighth.

He also did a wildlife display and built a birdhouse.

In addition to school, working, and FFA activities, Anson is a member of the Virginville Grange and the church youth group.

During the award presentation at the Farm Show, Anson read aloud the following poem.

PENNSYLVANIA
Anson Dietrich

Golden wheat fields swaying in the breeze,
Short and tall, pretty evergreen trees.
Green alfalfa waiting to be cut,
Barn shutters clapping open and shut.
Corn stalks standing so tall and proud,
Next to a field which has just been plowed.
Where Am I? Pennsylvania!

Sheep grazing on the steep mountainside,
Tobacco leaves waiting to be dried.
Noisy pigs oinking for their next meal,
See how they play and hear how they squeal.
Chickens cackling in the big barnyard,
The strutting rooster is the watch guard.
Where am I? Pennsylvania!

Red tomatoes hanging on the vine,
Waiting for some more great warm sunshine.
Peaches so ripe and ever so sweet,
Make a delicious snack or a treat.
Golden apples hanging on the tree,
Make a tasty pie, don't you agree?
Where am I? Pennsylvania!

Large trucks hauling fresh-cut straw and hay,
Going to market each and every day.
Busy bees buzzing through the sky,
Coming to the aid of the honey supply.
Milk trucks rumble slowly down the road,
Full to the top, a real heavy load.
Where am I? Pennsylvania!

Green leafy stalks standing in neat rows,
Potatoes in the ground, wait to grow.
Winter wheat peeping through the white snow,
Their tiny heads they want to show.
Purple grapes hanging from the long vine,
Make a delicious homemade wine.
Where am I? Pennsylvania!

From poultry to livestock, crops to fruit,
For Pennsylvania, there's no substitute!
Pennsylvania ag, for one and for all!
Whether your'e very small or real tall.
Products for the planet, for you and for me.
We all need Pennsylvania! I guarantee!

Anson Dietrich won $100 for a poem he wrote about Pennsylvania Ag for the Planet, a school assignment, that went on to sweep regional and state competitions.

Make It Happen! FFA

The Cedar Crest chapter has been identified as a national winner of the National FFA Organization's 1998 Fall Commodity Marketing Activity.

The Commodity Marketing Activity (CMA) is a biannual activity that is conduced for a six-week period in the spring and fall of each year. CMA integrates the classroom with real life experience, which helps students gain a practical knowledge of the Business world. Teams create a model farm, which may consist of corn, soybeans, wheat, soybean meal, cattle, hogs, cotton, orange juice, and sugar. Team members decide when to buy and sell these products to achieve the greatest economic gain.

Orders are called to a commodity broker and the trade is recorded. Current prices and market conditions are utilized; however, no money is exchanged Each FFA chapter may have up to four teams consisting of an unlimited number of team members.

Winners are determined by combining the team's trading and final exam scores The team, from each participating state with the highest combined total will be presented with the state winner's plaque. A cash award will be given to the team with the highest overall score in the nation.

The Commodity Marketing Activity is sponsored by the Stewart-Peterson Advisory Group, the Chicago Mercantile exchange, and Data Transmis-sion Network Corporation as a special project of the National FFA Foundation, Inc

Locally, the Cedar Crest FFA's team of Jason Balsbaugh, Erica Horner, Brent Copenhaver, Garrett Mase, and James Reb placed second in the state, missing first place by only one half of a point.

Your Daughter's Self Esteem

One dad I talked with in preparation for this article said, "I hated to tell her how pretty she was because I didn't want it to go to her head."

Fact is, it would have. And that's not a bad thing. Children need to know their fathers think they are wonderful. Not to the extent that they smile at misbehavior or praise mediocrity, but dads should be open and honest with their children expressing pleasure and joy when it is appropriate. To withhold praise out of fear that it will have some terrible effect on their personality is a big mistake. This is especially true for daughters, who tend to continue to look for affirmation from all men when they do not get it from their fathers. This can lead to poor decisions in relationships which can lead to disaster.

It's important to help your daughter develop a healthy self-esteem. That's how she perceives herself. It is her own opinions of herself, and when self esteem is healthy, it helps her to weigh choices wisely and cope positively with the frustrations and challenges of life. It will help her to be able to say "no" when she is being pressured about sex, or drugs, or alcohol. And it will help her to see what a healthy relationship with an important male should look like. That's a lot of responsibility, Dad!

What can you do to build self esteem in your children? I visited www.fathers.com and found these suggestions:

- Give your child unconditional love based on who she is, not what she does. Express love over and over and over.
- Respect your child. Treat her feelings with the respect that you would want to receive.
- Praise your child for accomplishments and good behavior, and be less quick and harsh about pointing out inappropriate behavior.
- Communicate with your child. Be an accessible father. The old song "Cat's in the Cradle" and today's hit "Busy Man" share the same message. You have a limited amount of time to do this in your child's life. If you don't do it now, it will be too late. They will grow up and be gone too soon. Take the time to allow your child to express ideas, feelings and zany fairy tales. Listen and let your child know that she is important to you.
- Encourage your child to develop talents and build confidence.
- Be consistent in establishing and enforcing limits.
- Appropriately hold, touch, and caress your child, and don't stop when she starts to physically develop into a woman.

If you haven't been accustomed to sharing this positive feedback to your daughter, now is a good time to start. It will "go to her head" and that's a good place for it to be!

Lancaster Society 8

The Lancaster Society of Farm Women #8 gathered at the Homestead Restaurant in Bainbridge on February 10. President Helen Wivell led the business meeting following the luncheon. Reports were given by the three delegates to the state convention that was held during farm show week.

"A Treasury of Winter Memories" was presented by the guest speaker, Mary Miller.

Members were reminded of the next meeting, March 10, at the Mount Joy Country Homes Community Room. Rev. Robert Lescallette will present to the group a "History of Maytown."

Whole Hog Workshop Teaches Proper Pork Cookery

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — If you cook pork like your mother and grandmother cooked pork, it probably isn't tasty. That's because pork is bred to be much leaner today and overcooking will cause dryness.

Demonstrating the proper way to cook a roast and novel ways to prepare pork entrees at the Cooking With Pork Workshop on Monday evening were extension agents Nancy Wiker, Chet Hughes, and Susan Fisher.

"Most people overcook pork today," Wiker said. "When pork is cooked correctly, it is juicy and tender with a little pink in the center."

A roast takes approximately 20 minutes per pound to reach the ideal state of doneness.

That's quite unlike the pork of a generation ago when Grandmother stuck a roast in the oven to cook all day. Although tender after a day of cooking, that pork was also loaded with fat.

Today, the leaner cuts of pork are know to contain less fat than boneless, skinless chicken breasts. That's great news for people who must watch their fat intake.

Another thing of the past is the fear that improperly cooked pork could cause trichinosis. Although pork should be cooked properly, today's modern breeding methods have eliminated trichinosis in this country.

Hughes told how producers must carefully monitor animals and record medical treatment to assure food safety.

Susan Fisher reminded the audience that the slow cooker is a great way to prepare pork dishes. However, do not place frozen meat in the slow cooker because the food cooks so slowly that it could remain in the bacterial danger zone too long.

Cut food into chunks to ensure thorough cooking. The crockpot should be less than half full or no more than two-thrids full for optimum results.

Know your crockpot or slow cooker. They vary somewhat in temperatures and the food may cook faster in some than in others.

Whenever possible, turn the cooker on the highest setting for the first hour of cooking time and then to low or the setting specified by the recipe.

Held at the Farm and Home Center, the workshop included slow cooker ideas, rubs, marinades, pork trivia games, and taste testing of demonstration foods.

Here are some recipes from the workshop. (The recipe for the Sausage Sauerkraut Supper made in a crockpot appears in the Home on the Range section of this issue).

Dairy Of Distinction Program Again Seeks Nice Looking Farms

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) - Do you take pride in maintaining your dairy farm? Does your dairy farm project an attractive, wholesome image to consumers? If so, the Dairy of Distinction Program of Pennsylvania, New York, and New Jersey, will consider your farm for the program's annual recognition awards.

The Northeast Dairy Farm Beautification Program that oversees the Distinction program was first started in 1983 in Pennsylvania to recognize the hard work and dedication of the farmers who maintain attractive farms. The purpose of the program is to instill a greater sense of confidence in the wholesomeness of dairy products, and increase their sales.

Farms that apply are judged on the roadside appearance of buildings, grounds, and surroundings, since this is what our dairy product consumers observe as they drive by the farm.

The cleanliness of the barnyard, feed areas, and manure management are all areas taken into consideration when a team of judges takes a look at your farm from a roadside point of view. Judging is conducted during the month of May. Award winners are announced during your local June Dairy Month activities.

To qualify for consideration, you must be actively dairy farming and shipping milk.

Applications are available for Pennsylvania dairy farms from Michael O'Conner, 324 Henning Building, Dept. of Dairy and Animal Science, Penn State University, University Park, PA 16802. Phone: (814) 863-3913.

For New York State applications are available from Carol Keene, RD 1, Box 31, Gilbertsville, NY 13776. Phone: (607) 783-2169.

For New Jersey applications, send to: August Knispel, 641 Sidney Road, Pittstown, NJ 08867. Phone: (908) 735-4989.

For Vermont applications, send to: Elisa Clancy, Vermont Department of Agriculture, 16 State St., Drawer 20, Montpelier, VT 05620-2901. Phone: (802) 828-3835.

All applications must be completed and returned to your respective state secretary by April 15, 1999.

The Dairy of Distinction program is financed in Pennsylvania by Dairy Farmers through the American Dairy Association Dairy Council and Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program in cooperation with many local agribusiness organizations. The program is conducted with advice and help from Penn State Cooperative Extension.

Dairy of Distinction

HOW IS YOUR FARM SCORED?

Northeast Dairy Farm Beautification Program, Inc.

Awards will be based upon neatness, good maintenance and other factors which can be controlled by the farmer. Attractive background scenery should not be weighed heavily in judging. All judging observations should be made from a vehicle at one or more points on an adjacent public highway (or if farm is off the road, the nearest lane). Judging should give equal consideration to old wood construction and new construction of metal or concrete block.

The award program may be used for subsequent advertising or promotion activities for dairy products or dairy farming. Farmers who apply for awards agree that; if selected they will cooperate with these activities and make all reasonable efforts to maintain both the exterior and interior of their properties in an acceptable condition.

HOW THE APPLICATION WORKS

The owner or operator of the dairy farm should sign the application and send it to NEDFBP secretary by April 15.

HOW THE JUDGING WORKS

Judging teams will visit farms during the month of May. Farms will be judged each year as the award is presented on an annual basis. Any dairy failing to maintain appearance standards will be asked to remove their sign. The Dairy of Distinction signs remain the property of the committee, not the property of the dairy farmer. All farms must achieve a compliance score of 90 percent on their Dairy of Distinction score card. Your cooperative or milk handler will be contacted to approve your milk quality.

RULES FOR THE DAIRY OF DISTINCTION AWARD

1). The Dairy of Distinction sign remains the property of the Northeast Dairy Farm Beautification Committee.
2). The post and bracket shall be supplied by and maintained by the dairy farmer. It is suggested that a wood post 4' x 4' x 12' or iron pipe 2' x 12' be used. Posts or pipe should be installed and maintained in true vertical position with 8' above ground. Top of the bracket should be lower than six inches from the top of the post.
3). Sign shall be displayed in front of the dairy at roadside. An attractive post and bracket, or other frame, shall be used to display the sign. No more than three signs should be displayed from the sign frame or post, and all shall be of a style, general size and quality comparable to the Dairy of Distinction sign. Sign should be secured on all sides to avoid wind damage.
4). Signs shall not be moved to other premises. New owners of a Dairy of Distinction farm must apply to retain the sign.
5) Replacement of damaged signs shall be the discretion of the committee.
6). No producer shall be charged with scoring or sign expense.
7). Judges' decisions will be final.
8). Judging will take place between May 1st and May 31st.
9). Farms awarded a Dairy of Distinction sign in previous years will be judged between April 1st and April 30th. If they do not qualify, they will be rejudged between May 1st and May 31st so they have the opportunity to keep the sign.
10). Farms that do not requalify will return the sign to their regional Dairy of Distinction Committee.

Food for a Happy Heart

The bad news — heart disease continues to be our number one killer.

The good news — we can do something about it.

By changing a few bad habits, we'll be on our way to a long and healthy life.

Usually, it's much easier said than done. For that reason, we have to take it one day at a time, and make small changes over time.

In addition to stopping smoking and beginning an exercise program, your eating plan plays a major part in reducing your risk of heart disease. One day we hear "eat oat bran." The next day, we're told to "go back to butter." Should we take fish oil or garlic pills? What's a person to believe?

What are HDLs and LDLs?

What we do know for sure is that eating a diet low in saturated fat can help to reduce your risk of heart disease. It all has to do with HDLs and LDLs. Simply stated, HDLs and LDLs are lipoproteins in your body that carry cholesterol, a fat-like waxy substance that comes from animal products.

While HDLs are often referred to as "good" cholesterol carriers, LDLs are called the "bad" cholesterol carriers. An easy way to remember the good from the bad is that HDLs are healthy carriers, while LDLs are lousy carriers.

Think of HDLs as garbage trucks. They pick up the cholesterol (garbage) in the bloodstream and take it to the liver, which gets rid of it. LDLs are like delivery trucks. They pick up the cholesterol in the bloodstream and deliver it to your heart.

How does diet affect HDLs and LDLs? The three types of fat in your diet can affect HDLs and LDLs. Saturated fats, which come from animal products, are solid at room temperature. Foods containing saturated fat are butter, hydrogenated (solid) fats and shortenings, lard, bacon, chicken skin, fat in red meat, and palm and coconut oils. Saturated fats increase the LDL level in your bloodstream.

Liquid oils are called polyunsaturated and monounsaturated fats. Polyunsaturated fats include corn, safflower, sunflower and cottonseed oils. Olive, peanut and canola oils are monounsaturated fats. While polunsaturated fats are O.K., monounsaturated fats are far better. The reason for this is that both of these oils can decrease LDLs, which protect us against heart disease. The problem with polyunsaturated fats is that they will also slightly decrease the HDLs. That's not good because HDLs protect us. Since monounsaturated fats don't decrease HDLs, they are the preferred fat.

Can I take a supplement to reduce my risk of heart disease?

Fish oil, garlic, and Vitamin E have all be linked to decreasing one's risk of heart disease. Fish oil has been found to decrease triglycerides (TG), but not cholesterol. While we know that very high TG levels can result in pancreatitis (inflammation of the pancreas), we're not exactly sure of what the relationship is between TG and heart disease. Current research suspects that a high TG, along with a high cholesterol, may increase your risk of heart disease.

Although garlic has been linked with reducing cancer as well as heart disease risk, more research is necessary. While the use of garlic in the prevention of these chronic diseases looks promising, we're not sure of the amount and the form one needs to take to see the benefits. This will be an area of great interest in the future.

The antioxidant Vitamin E looks like it may be beneficial in reducing heart disease risk. When LDLs are attached to oxygen, the cholesterol they deposit easily sticks to the arteries. If there is no oxygen attached to the LDL, the cholesterol doesn't seem to stick to the arteries as much. This is where Vitamin E comes into play as an antioxident. It may prevent oxygen from attaching to the LDLs. How much Vitamin E should you take? Studies have not confirmed an exact amount, but up to 800 I.U. per day has been shown to be safe. If you choose to take a Vitamin E supplement, tell your doctor.

Will oatmeal prevent heart disease? The Food and Drug Administration approved the use of a health claim to be placed on labels of oat bran, oatmeal and whole oat flour. This claim states that "these foods, as part of a diet low in saturated fat and cholesterol, may reduce the risk of heart disease."

The catch here is that you have to eat four servings of oatmeal a day to see a benefit. And it's not magic. Eating eggs and bacon with a bowl of oat bran does not do the trick. It's necessary for you to consistently eat the correct number of servings per day almost every day to see long-lasting results. As soon as you stop eating oat products, you're cholesterol levels will return to pre-oat days.

Which is better: butter or margarine? For those of you who are butter lovers, the reports of several years ago that butter is better for your heart than margarine, brought a smile to your face.

Margarine's culprit: trans fatty acids. Researchers reported that these fatty acids can actually increase your risk of heart disease more than saturated fats. Butter lovers rejoiced and returned to their first love, only to hear more controversy.

The verdict is, eat whatever you like best, but in small amounts. If you intend to continue to eat a high-fat diet, margarine is the better choice Health professionals would prefer you to eat a small amount of your favorite topping and decrease your total fat intake.

Hopefully, this has cleared up some of the confusion you've felt over the past several years. Remember, change takes time. You didn't learn your habits overnight, so you can't expect to change them that quick.

Take one step at a time. Work on changing one food-related and one activity-related behavior over several weeks and you'll soon have a very happy, healthy heart.

4-H HAPPENINGS

Adams County 4-H

The Adams County Sheep Club is a group of 4-Hers between the ages of 8 and 18 who are interested in successfully raising lambs for either a market or breeding project. The market project is a short-term project which begins in mid-April and ends in early August with a show and sale at the South Mountain Fairgrounds. Its goal is to raise a maximum of six lambs to a weight between 80 and 130 pounds. This is done with exercise and proper feeding. The breeding project is a long-term project that involves raising ewes and rams to improve the members' flocks. Both projects teach responsibility, record keeping, health, care, showing and other skills. The club meets once a month at the Adams County extension office or at members' homes from February to September.

The Adams County 4-H Goat Club is a club for anyone who loves goats. They are a diverse group of youth who have goats as pets, market animals, and dairy animals. Their topics at their meetings range from care and maintenance, to showing and fitting, to cheesemaking. You don't even have to own a goat to be in the club. You may be just thinking of getting one. The project is complete at the 4-H Roundup at the end of July with a completed project book and poster display. The exhibition of an animal is optional. The club meets the second Thursday of each month at the Adams County extension office.

The Adams County 4-H Swine Club is a group of 4-H youth that are interested in the raising and marketing of swine. They cover a variety of topics at their meetings that this year will include swine housing, livestock equipment, swine judging, cuts of meat, breeds, and exhibiting. The market hog projects are raised to a weight between 220 and 270 pounds and are finished at a show and sale at the South Mountain Fairgrounds at the beginning of August. The club meets once a month from January to November at the Adams County Extension Office.

The Adams County 4-H Horse Club, also known as the Jump and Jive 4-H Horse and Pony Club, meets every third Thursday of each month from 7 p.m.-8:30 p.m. at the Adams County extension office or at local horse farms. The club covers different topics throughout the year from health to riding. This year they will be having a mounted clinic with Olympic rider Mark Leone for 4-H members only and visiting Windy Ridge Equine Rescue, Penn National Racetrack, and an AHSA recognized horse show.

If you are interested or would like more information about any of these clubs, contact the Penn State Cooperative Extension of Adams County Office, 1135 Chambersburg Rd., Gettysburg, PA, 17325, (717) 334-6271 or (717) 624-4525.

Eat Breakfast! Got Milk?

EMLENTON (Clarion Co.) – "Eat Breakfast! got milk?" is the theme of a special promotional kit for schools to highlight National School Breakfast Week, March 1-5. In The Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program service area, key schools are invited to participate in the program that promotes eating school breakfast, including milk, as a smart way to start their day.

"We are very interested in building demand for milk in schools. helping schools to increase participation in the school breakfast program is one way we can do that," said Cindy Weimer, spokesperson for PDPP.

The " Eat Breakfast? got milk?" promotion kits will be placed in 112 schools in Pennsylvania, Ohio and West Virginia and will reach more than 43,000 children. The targeted schools are part of a group of "key account" schools identified by the American Dairy Association & Dairy Council Mid East in December 1998 as schools who are good candidates to accept and use dairy farmer funded school programs and also provide the feedback necessary to evaluate the program's effectiveness.

The "Eat Breakfast! got milk?" promotion kits will contain the following materials; "Adventures in Good Eating" poster series and "got milk?" posters for cafeteria or classroom use, bookmarks and "got milk?" tattoos and pencils for students. And to make it all happen, each school will also receive an idea sheet" with tips and information about promoting milk and the school breakfast program in schools. As an added bonus, cafeteria workers in the selected schools will receive aprons bearing the slogan, "Eat Breakfast! got milk?" to reinforce the message both during School Breakfast Week and thereafter.

Promoting school breakfast program is important to the dairy industry because according to the American School Food Service Association, each school breakfast must include 8-ounces of milk to all children grades K-12 as part of a school breakfast. Promoting school breakfast participation is also important to the dairy industry because school breakfast provides a wealth of benefits - mostly importantly, it enables children to focus on learning. Recent research conducted at Harvard University and in the state of Minnesota has confirmed that children who eat breakfast perform better academically and socially.

Dairy Promotion To Sponsor Special Olympics

EMLENTON (Clarion Co.) — The Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program has approved the sponsorship package for the 1999 Pennsylvania Special Olympics Winter Games. On Feb. 23-26 the games featured competition in alpine and cross-country skiing, figure and speed skating, and floor hockey team and individual competition. As many as 700 athletes, 200 coaches, and 1,500 volunteers participated in this year's event This is the first time that PDPP has been involved with Special Olympics.

"We believe that not only will we benefit from additional exposure for our 'got milk?" campaign, but we are proud to support the brave athletes of Special Olympics of Pennsylvania," said Scott D Hunt, regional marketing manager for the American Dairy Association & Dairy Council Mid East, the organization that PDPP contracts with to execute dairy promotion in western Pennsylvania.

The sponsorship package includes banner recognition at the opening and closing ceremonies and at the high traffic ice arena where the figure and speed skating competitions will take place. A "got milk?" ad will appear in the Special Olympics Winter Games program and the "got milk?" logo will be visible on T-shirts volunteers will wear during the games.

Additionally, PDPP has secured a "got milk?" logo advertisement on the Special Olympics Pennsylvania web site for the coming year. The logo ad will link site visitors and the ADADC Mid East's interactive web site. The PDPP board also plans to support Special Olympics of Pennsylvania Summer Games in June.

Special Olympics Pennsyl-vania provides year-round training and competition in 23 Olympic-type sports to over 27,000 children and adults with mental retardation or closely related developmental disabilities.

We were always glad to have our children come home and visit with us. However, this past weekend was almost too busy.

One family came for the weekend so that the cousins could play together. Then another family came unexpectedly and then there was another cousin to include in playing. Someone said that I looked like I had a child care center. But to me it looked more like running a restaurant. There were guests here for seven meals in a row. It is good that I like to cook as I surely peeled a lot of potatoes. When the apple crisp was eaten, we started on the frozen Christmas cookies. For one meal, my husband ordered pizza, which is something we had never done before this.

As this was the Valentine weekend we had planned to go to a dance. But by Saturday night, we did not feel much like dancing. And, the 16-piece band was so very loud that we could not even talk to other people.

The other week I followed my husband up a very steep trail into a woodland. I was huffing and puffing as we ascended the hill. He was hunting for old chestnut trees that had died but might have sprouted some new shoots. At the top of the trail, I sat on a log and rested. The experience surely reminded me of the many years when I went deer hunting with Allen. We even saw a tree stand in the Martic Township Park. He didn't find what he was looking for, so we'll probably go again.

Long ago his ancestors owned a large nut and fruit orchard in this area and so he has a special interest in looking over the acreage. Maybe someday he will find what he is looking for.

FSA Announces New Customer — Friendly Loan Procedures

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Farm Loan Manager James Tomanelli announced the publication of new regulations streamlining the application and servicing procedures for Farm Service Agency (FSA) guaranteed farm ownership and operating loans.

"This new rule recognizes that lenders with sufficient agricultural lending experience are qualified to use some of their own loan-approval procedures," said Tomanelli. "We have had very few losses in the guarantee program. It's a highly cost-effective way to make credit available to farmers who couldn't otherwise find lenders, and this is part of our effort to expand the number of lenders participating by making the program more attractive."

The new rule, published in the Federal Register, is designed to reduce the time required to approve lenders' applications for guarantees while making the approval process more consistent and reducing the paperwork required. The goal is a more efficient and "use-friendly" program.

Changes to the loan guarantee program include the following:

• Agency approval of documentation for loans under $50,000 is reduced or eliminated. This substantially reduces the administrative costs borne by the lender.

• The Certified Lender Program has been expanded.

• A new Preferred Lender Program for experienced lenders with high volume and low losses is instituted. Lenders in form FSA about their credit management systems. After approval of the lender's procedures, the Agency requires minimal information concerning individual loans. The official application form consists of one page, and approval is automatic if the Agency does not respond within 14 days of submissin of a complete application.

Other changes include redesigned and consolidated forms to reduce paperwork burden; reduced requirements for historical documentation; reduced appraisal requirements, in line with the lender's regulators; and expanded purposes for which lines of credit may be used.

Further information on FSA's Guaranteed Farm Loan programs is available from James Tomanelli at the Lancaster USDA Service Center, 1383 Arcadia Rd., Lancaster, PA 17601, (717) 397-6235.

Kopp Represents Pennsylvania Producers At Beef Board Meeting

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Jay Kopp, a dairy operator from Middletown, represented Pennsylvania beef producers as a retiring USDA appointment to the Cattlemen's Beef Board (CBB) at its winter meeting in Charlotte, Feb. 10-14.

Following service on various checkoff program committees and subcommittees, Beef Board members elected the officer team that will lead the 111-member volunteer group for the coming year and approved a $4.3 million budget amendment to supplement FY-99 checkoff-funded programs.

The CBB, whose mission is to build demand for beef, elected Lyle Gray its chairman. Gray, a cow-calf operator and feeder from Leon, Kan., was first appointed to the board in 1992 and served as its vice chairman in 1998. He has also served on the Beef Board Executive Committee and the Beef Promotion Operating Committee.

Les McNeill, a feedlot and stocker operator from Panhandle, Texas, was elected vice chairman. The secretary of agriculture appointed him to the CBB in 1996. He has served on the Joint Industry Evaluation Committee and served as CBB secretary/treasurer in 1998.

A dairyman from Finchville, Ky., Gil Tucker, was elected the board's secretary/treasurer. Tucker was appointed to the board in 1994 and has served on its executive commiteee as well as its administration subcommittee.

The Beef Board also elected its executive committee members and Beef Promotion Operating Committee representatives. The Board's Executive Committee acts on behalf of the board, between meetings of the full body. The operating committee brings together state and national checkoff programs into a coordinated effort and approves contracts with industry-governed organizations to implement programs, as provided by law.

The 1999 Executive Committee members are Les McNeill; Lyle Gray; Gill Tucker; Trudy Carey of Brandon, Fla.; Dan Hammond of American Falls, Idaho; Roger Houston of Jacksonville, Ill.; Larry Hudkins of Malcom, Neb.; Gary Jurgovsky of North Huntingdon, Pa.; Dee Lacey of Paso Robles, Calif.; Pat McDowell of Shamrock, Texas; and Elaine Swiler of Cameron, N.Y.

The 1999 CBB Operating Committee representatives are Lyle Gray; Les McNeill; Gil Tucker; Bill Brandenberg of El Centro, Calif.; Ann Bruntz of Friend, Neb.; Jim Chapman of Klamath Falls, Ore.; Tim Coe of Wedowee, Ala.; Bill Ehrke of Fort Atkinson, Wis.; Donna Sharp of Bath, S.D.; and Perry Teeter of Mooresville, N.C.

In other action, the Beef Board approved a $4.3 million budget amendment to extend checkoff-funded programs in the following areas: promotion - $1.8 million; research - $653,000; consumer information - $1.2 million; industry information - $78,000; and foreign marketing - $566,000. The budget amendment monies were made available through revenues that exceeded projections, savings in administrative costs, and 1998 projects that were completed under budget.

The amendment brings total FY-99 budgeted Beef Board expenditures to $50.7 million. The 1999 budget by component is promotion - $26.1 million; research - $5.6 million; consumer information - $7.1 million; industry information - $2.4 million; foreign marketing - $5.6 million; producer communications - $1.1 million; evaluation - $150,000; program development - $125,000; USDA oversight - $250,000; and administration - $2.3 million.

The Beef Board's winter meeting was held in conjunction with annual meeting of the National Cattlemen's Beef Association as part of the Cattle Industry Annual Convention and Trade Show.

Of the 1,773 sires in the sire summary, 448 have carcass EPDs. The American Gelbvieh Association released its first carcass EPDs in 1998. With the continued success of the AGA Carcass Sire Testing Program, more sires have carcass EPDs listed with each National Cattle Evaluation run.

Interested producers may request the most current EPD information one of three ways:

- 24-hour Gelbvieh EPD Line at (303) 465-0757
- The AGA Website at http://www.gelbvieh.org/~aga

CONQUERING CALVING PROGRAMS

A recent summary of causes of calving difficulty at the University of Nebraska (Deutcher, 1998) has shown there are other factors that may influence calving difficulty. These include:

• Calf vigor will be reduced and mortality will increase as calving difficulty increases.

• Conception rate will decrease as the level of calving difficulty increases. While pregnancy rates were not different, it still follows there will be an extended calving interval and younger, lighter calves next year.

• Calf birth weight was higher after colder winters and calving difficulty was greater.

• One of the most important ways to control calving difficulty was to use service sires with a low birth weight EPD and high accuracy to cull heifers that had heavy calves and small pelvic areas. As discussed later, cows should be checked every 2-3 hours during calving to optimize calving success. If this is not possible because management and time constraints, then the next best thing is to be highly selective of sires using birthweight EPDs.

Secondly, sire breed was formerly used as the criteria for managing calving difficulty. This can no longer be considered pertinent since there is evidence there is as much variation in this trait within most breeds as there is across these breeds.

Birth Management

If assistance must be given to a cow, try to remember the adage that "you can pull one too late, but is pretty hard to pull one too early." Mortimer (1998) has suggested some signs when assistance may be necessary:

•If the water sac is visible for two hours and the cow is not trying.

• If the cow has been trying for more than 30 minutes and no progress has been made.

•If the cow quits trying over a 15-20 minute time period.

•If the cow or calf is showing signs of excessive fatigue or stress such as a swollen tongue in the calf or rectal bleeding from the cow.

•You have determined there is an abnormal presentation that cannot continue.

Most successful producers will lend assistance if there is any question. The cow and calf will be safer and healthier if assistance is given in the right way;

•Be sure the calf is oriented properly with the head between the front legs and the hind legs stretched out behind.

•Lend assistance by pulling on both front legs uniformly downward (between the cows hind legs) until the shoulders have passed through the pelvis.

•Rotate the calf slightly to allow the hips to take advantage of the shape of the pelvis. The widest area in the pelvis is usually diagonal (at about a 45 degree angle) to the hip.

•Continue to pull downward until the calf is all the way out.

• If the presentation is wrong (true in about 5 percent of all births), try to straighten the calf manually. Many calves are born upside down and (or) backwards. This presentation is usually not as severe as a breech birth, where the hind legs are up under the calf's body. If the calf is breech, or if it takes more than an hour to extract a calf, call your vet. Remember, a calf can remain alive as long as the navel cord remains attached.

The only calving difficulties that can be corrected are those that are seen. Frequent checking of cows during the calving season is essential to success. Heifers are generally checked every two hours and mature cows less often as management needs dictate. This is a particularly important reason to consolidate calving (breeding) into a narrow window of time.

Most successful herds will calve in 45-60 days, partly because calving management can be focused into a shorter period of time. This also allows many other management activities to be done on time (vaccination, feeding, weaning, and marketing.) Herds that have extended or year-round calving will generally have lower calving rates because calving management cannot be optimized.

Once the calf is born alive, the next important step is to be sure it gets some colostrum. Calves that do not get colostrum within 12-24 hours after birth will seldom live. Colostrum can be stored for emergency use by freezing it. Many dairy farmers will have colostrum available regularly. Remember that colostrum is diluted by the volume of milk produced, so try to collect colostrum from the lowest-yielding dairy cow.

In beef cows, there is generally not enough variation in volume to be a problem with colostrum quality. Calves should receive about 1/2 to 3/4 gallon twice of colostrum from a dairy cow within 12-24 hours of birth, and about 1/4 to 1/2 gallon from a beef cow. If the colostrum is frozen, thaw it in warm water Do not put it in the microwave oven to thaw, as this may denature some important proteins in the colostrum. If the calf will not nurse the colostrum from a bottle, it must be forced into the stomach. Esophageal feeders are available for this purpose, and a tube and a funnel will work in an emergency. With either method, care must be taken to place the tube in the stomach and not the lungs.

The environment will play an important role in subsequent calf health, particularly for the incidence of scours. The most important feature of a calving location is that it be dry. For spring-calving cows in Pennsylvania, this may be the most difficult part of providing good calving management.

When the sun is shining and the ground is dry, it is seldom necessary to have cows calve indoors. A sunny, dry south-facing slope is a good calving location,even when there are subfreezing temperatures. When outside conditions are not dry or protection from wind and snow are needed, the calving barn should be as dry as possible. It is also a good idea to try to keep the location separate for first-calf heifers and mature cows, as calves from heifers are more likely to get scours than those from older cows. These barns can be open-sided in Pennsylvania conditions as temperature will seldom be as important as dry conditions for calf health.

The primary causes of scours in calves are from the calf's environment. There is no magic formula to prevent or cure scours, but sound management will be the most important weapon. dry conditions, not bringing outside animals in at calving time, trying to isolate calves that get scours, separating heifers and cows at calving, and treating scouring calves aggressively are the best practices available.

Other management practices that are often performed at calving include castration of male calves, implanting, identification, and vitamin shots. When calves are in a healthy environment, males that are destined to be steers can be castrated soon after birth. This reduces the stress on calves from later castration, and it is easier to handle the calves.

Identification of calves with ear tags, tattoos, or other means will never be easier than at birth Non-breeding animals can be implanted at birth with a number of implants designed for use in young calves. Check the label on the implant to be sure it can be used in newborn calves. Do not implant calves that may be used as bulls or breeding heifers. Some implants are labeled for use in breeding heifers at birth, the reproductive efficiency results from this practice are mixed. In selenium-deficient areas, injections can be given at birth with a combination of selenium and vitamin E. There is no evidence that other vitamin shots are warranted under normal conditions.

The only calf that counts is the one that is born alive, stays alive, and grows at a reasonable rate until being sold at weaning. The man part of management will be an important part of successfully weaning live calves.

In addition, one People's Choice Award was given, chosen by the youth attending the convention from all the entries submitted. The top individual in each category received an engraved picture frame from the Pennsylvania Holstein Association.

All entrants had their hard work displayed all weekend for all those in attendance to view at the convention. Winners were chosen in three divisions, Junior, Intermediate and Senior. The top displays were awarded certificates for their efforts Special thanks goes to Leprino Foods, the sponsor for this year's contest

In the Junior Division, there was a tie between the Bradford County Juniors, with their display entitled "Cows – More Than Milk" and Aaron Davis, who presented a display entitled "Friends."

In the Intermediate Division, top honors went to Berks County with their display "Milk vs. Soda," while Tricia McIlwain presented her display "Tracking the Future" to claim first place in the Senior Division.

Congratulations to the winners and thanks to all participants for making the contest a success.

Dairy Bowl Contest Winners

The Pennsylvania Junior Holstein dairy bowl contest was held during the Junior Holstein Convention. Twenty-one teams competed in two age divisions—9 junior teams and 12 senior teams.

In the junior division, a team from Berks County consisting of Jill Neiman, Pamela Werley, Keri Houp and Benjamin Weist won the title in the double elimination contest. The Berks County team is coached by Teresa Davis and Donna Werley. To win the title they defeated a team from Franklin County made up of Rachel Oliver, Daniel Oliver, Matthew Reichard, and Aaron Horst, their coach is Dr. Alan Oliver.

In the senior division a team from Lebanon County completed a perfect day, winning the double elimination contest over Franklin County. The winning team of Kathy Habecker, Heather Oberholtzer, Alisha Risser and Andy Ebersole, their coaches are Duane Nolt and Jeff Hostetter. The second place team from Franklin County consisted of Herb Hoffeditz, Thomas Harwood, Amy Kulick and Tia Crider Their coach is Donald Harwood.

The contest this year was sponsored by the Monsanto Company, who supplied the winning teams with jackets and other awards. The Penn State Dairy Science Club coordinated the contest questions and supplied the volunteer help for the contest. Without the help and support of these two fine groups, it would be nearly impossible to run a contest involving 21 teams with more than 100 individuals.

Berks County and Lebanon Counties will represent Pennsylvania in the National Holstein Dairy Bowl Contest to be held during the National Holstein Convention in Boise, Idaho from June 18-21, 1999.

Will The World Be Hungry By 2020?

BALTIMORE, Md. — Thanks to the "Green Revolution," the world will close out this century with enough food production to satisfy its population, but scientists are saying complacency could starve people in the next millennium.

"It's a very fragile situation," said Dr. S.K. De Datta, director of the Office of International Research and Development and associate dean of the College of Agriculture and Life Sciences at Virginia Polytechnic Institute, Blacksburg, Va. "We need to increase food production without exploitive agriculture. We want to provide for ourselves and our children—but also to feed our grandchildren and beyond."

Preservation of shrinking resources—land, water, and people—must be a major premise of new agricultural research, De Datta said in a presentation to joint meetings of three agricultural research societies. His concerns are that productive farmland is taken out of production through urban growth, water is less available, and more people are abandoning farming for the lure of higher wages in industrial settings. It is a worldwide problem.

De Datta made his remarks during the annual joint meeting of the American Society of Agronomy (ASA), Crop Science Society of America (CSSA), and the Soil Sciences Society of America (SSSA), in October in Baltimore.

Food production is more than a question of farm management and agricultural research, according to De Datta. It also depends on government policies.

He noted that India now spends about $400 million in agricultural research. The result is 207 million of grain production last year compared to less than 100 million tons in the 1960s. With nearly a billion people, it is now able to raise food for its people, but the population increases by two percent annually.

The research and production technology has to keep up with population growth, he said.

Wheat production was down last year because of drought resulting from the El Nino weather patterns, so India is importing wheat from the world market. For the current growing year, early rain has brought an early harvest and provide water for irrigation of new crops.

Part of the "Green Revolution" was worldwide investment in research, particularly by western countries. De Datta said the United States government spends about $17 million in cooperative research in nine worldwide initiatives, "but that funds about half of what is needed."

He said U.S. citizens may have a misconception that the United States is helping the world by freely giving grain to developing nations.

"Few Asian countries receive food aid from the United States," De Datta said. "They buy. It's a cash transaction. Food deficient countries will not trade with the United States because they don't have the money."

The situation worsens as foreign currencies have lower value against the U.S. dollar. While countries are more competitive with sales of finished product, they also must buy raw materials and equipment at higher prices from western sources.

The "Green Revolution" is both blessing and challenge, according to De Datta. Because of improved food production, he fears the world will become complacent.

"The political economist Thomas Malthus scared the world with his predictions of a potential doomsday when population would exceed food supply. It put science to work," he said. "My task is to build an increased awareness, not complacency. We cannot live on the island of abundant food while the rest of the world suffers."

Marketing, Entrepreneurial Skills Featured At Farmer Workshop

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Home-grown examples of Pennsylvania's entrepreneurial and marketing talent will highlight the Fifth Annual New and Beginning Farmer Workshop on March 13 at the Holiday Inn, Hershey-Harrisburg. Pennsylvania Agriculture Secretary Samuel E. Hayes Jr. will welcome workshop participants to the day-long event scheduled from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Master Farmers Samuel and Beverly Minor from Washington, Pennsylvania will keynote the workshop describing how they developed their dairy farm into a diverse agricultural enterprise that supports both their family and the local community. Today, the couple manages The Springhouse, a farm market and a restaurant that is open 361 days a year. Following the keynote address, smaller breakout sessions will help beginners choose an enterprise, develop a business plan, determine how they can finance the start-up venture, and select a mentor. Pennsylvania vegetable growers George and Melanie DeVault and dairy farmers, Jessie Singleton, Kim Seely, and Clair Hershey will tell of their strategies of working into the family farm or how they started from scratch.

Hog farmer Bruce Dickson and poultry farmer David Fink will discuss the unique marketing efforts that have allowed their farm business to break out of the conventional mold.

Mel Gensamer, who is apprenticing at Slate Quarry Winery, will describe his experiences getting started in Pennsylvania's growing grape industry.

Sessions on selling to supermarkets, pick your own, roadside markets, niche markets, farm vacations, value-added and grazing will guarantee beginning farmers ideas on how to get started and succeed in their own farm ventures.

Farmers Nadine Fox, Leanna Schaeffer, Lela Reichart, Robert Lange, and Glenn Moyer will discuss these marketing strategies.

Other organization with representatives speaking at the conference include Farm Credit, Farm Service Agency, Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, and Penn State Cooperative Extension.

Individuals who are considering farming, who are new to farming, or who want to change their enterprise are encouraged to attend.

For more information about the workshop, please call Pennsylvania Farm Link at 717-260-0400.

Registration is required for all persons attending the workshop. The cost is $45 per person or $70 per couple with a $5 discount for registration by February 26, 1999. Lunch is included in the fee.

Pennsylvania Farm Link is a non-profit organization that works to bring the next generation into farming by fostering successufl farm transfers and by linking beginning and retiring farmers. It is governed by a Board of Directors representing diverse agricultural interests.

Preservation Board Approves Farmland

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — On behalf of Gov. Tom Ridge, Agriculture Secretary Samuel E. Hayes Jr. announced that the Agricultural Land Preservation Board has approved easement purchases for 15 farms across the commonwealth.

"The addition of these farms demonstrates the commitment of the Ridge Administration to preserving our farmlands and supporting our farm families, who work to provide fresh, nutritious agricultural products to Pennsylvanians and to the world," said Secretary Hayes, who chairs the board.

Created in 1989, the Pennsylvania Agricultural Land Preservation Board oversees the state Farmland Preservation Program. The program allows the state and counties to purchase development rights, referred to as easements, to guarantee that farms will remain as agricultural land.

Including five county-owned easements accepted recently, the Farmland Preservation Program has protected 1,065 farms in 41 counties encompassing 133,700 acres.

Following is a list of the 15 properties, including owner, municipality, acreage, and purchase cost:

Annual Ag Outlook Forums

LEWISBURG (Union Co.) — The 9th Annual Ag Outlook Forums on Feb. 17 were conducted at the Troy Fire Hall in the afternoon and at the Country Cupboard Best Western Inn in the evening with more than 125 attending.

The annual event features speakers who address concerns affecting today's ag communities. This year's topics included asset transfers, expansions, crop insurance, and an economic outlook for 1999.

Dr. David M. Kohl of Virginia Polytechnic Institute kept the interest of the attendees through clear, concise examples, personal anecdotes and humor while addressing the concerns of survival and expansion of agriculture in the 21st century.

With his years of knowledge and experience, Dr. Lou Moore of Pennsylvania State University presented an agricultural economic outlook for 1999 with a sense of humor while comparing 1998 figures with projected figures for 1999 and reviewing positive and negative factors affecting outcomes.

Although both these speakers touched on the future of agriculture, Tom Weller of Crop Growers Insurance drove home the importance of risk and volatility and the needs of farmers to protect their investments through crop insurance.

Prevent Injuries, Deaths From Skid-Steer Loaders

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) – Skid-steer loaders put workers at risk of rollover and runover incidents. If you operate or work near skid-steer loaders, take these steps to protect yourself.

Follow safe operating procedures:

•Work with the seat belt fastened and the restraint bar in place.

•Load, unload, and turn on the level ground, when possible.

•Travel and turn with the bucket in the lowest position possible.

•Do not travel across slopes. Travel straight up or down with heavy end of the machine pointed uphill.

•Keep bystanders away from work area.

•Never disable safety devices.

Enter and exit from the loader safely:

•Enter the loader only when the bucket is flat on the ground or when the lift-arm supports are in place.

•When entering the loader, face the seat and keep a three-point contact with handholds and steps.

•Never use foot or hand controls for steps or handholds.

•Before leaving the operator's seat, lower the bucket flat to the ground, set the parking brake, and turn off the engine.

Maintain the machine in safe operating condition:

•Keep the foot controls free of mud, ice, snow, and debris.

•Regularly inspect and maintain; interlock controls, safety belts, restraint bars, side screens and Rollover Protection Structures (ROPS).

•Never modify or bypass safety devices.

•If you must preform service under a raised bucket, use the lift-arm supports.

We Breed Champions, Too!

Well, we really don't "breed" them, but we feel each mixer that we produce is a champion in every way. We take great care in designing each machine before it is built. We also track each machine after it leaves our facility, making sure it is delivered to you on time, and ready to go to work the minute it is off the truck. We then follow the life of the Mixer, making sure that the customer is happy with the machine, long after the sale. If you want a company that takes as much pride in their product as we know you do in yours, give us a call.

When designing the MF® 8780 Rotary combine, our engineers started with a very basic premise: The best way to keep things from failing is to eliminate them. The fewer moving parts, the fewer problems. As you can see from the numbers above, they were extremely successful.

As you might expect, a simple combine also means an efficient and gentle combine for great sample quality. And for great productivity, there's a deluxe centered cab, seat-mounted console, Cummins "Power Bulge" engine and the optional, state-of-the-art Fieldstar® Precision Farming System.

Massey Ferguson brought you the industry's first self-propelled combine in 1938. Sixty years later the best combine technology is still at your nearby Massey Ferguson Dealer. Check it out.

CASE IH 955 Cyclo Planters

A seed needs six things from a planter to grow and thrive...six factors which produce a precision-controlled environment.

And only a Case International 950 Early Riser Planter, with its exclusive Cyclo® Air System, pays close attention to all six:

(1) Planted to the moisture level;
(2) Uniform depth;
(3) Evenly spaced;
(4) Good seed-to-soil contact;
(5) Uniform soil pressure; and
(6) Accurate population.

You'll get this performance whether you're planting in no-till, mulch-till or clean-till situations.

OVERVIEW OF CURRENT IMMUNOSUPPRESSIVE DISEASES OF BROILERS

Patricia Dunn, DVM
Research Associate
Animal Diagnostic Laboratory

Raising healthy, "disease-free" poultry flocks results in general well-being of the birds, profitability for the producer, and quality products for the consumer.

This goal is particularly important in raising broiler chickens, whose relatively short lives often do not allow adequate time for complete recovery if disease does strike. Decreased growth and uniformity, increased feed conversion, and increased condemnation rates are just a few of the ramifications of disease insult in broilers.

Disease results from the interaction of factors related to the host (chicken), the environment, and pathogens (disease-causing agents). One of the most important of the host factors is the status of its major defense system, known by the general term "immune system." The more we can do to preserve the integrity of the chicken's innate and adaptive immunity, the less chance that clinical disease will develop.

The chicken, like other birds and mammals, possesses natural or "innate" barriers to disease. Healthy intact skin and feathers are barriers to entry of some potential pathogens. A major part of innate defense of the upper respiratory tract is the "mucociliary escalator" of the trachea. The normal trachea is lined by ciliated cells covered by a thin layer of clear mucus in which inhaled particles become entrapped. The cilia beat upward in unison, moving the mucus and trapped particles our toward the mouth. This prevents microbes from traveling deeper into the lungs and air sacs and setting up infections there. Similarly, innate defense of the enteric tract relies on an intestine with an intact mucosal lining colonized by normal gut flora and normal peristaltic activity that moves the remains of ingested material out to the vent. If these natural barriers and secretions are left undisturbed, there is less chance for potential pathogens to cause local or systemic infection. In general, innate immunity is preserved by management to optimize the environment, including air, litter, feed and water quality, general cleanliness, and appropriate bird density.

The specific or adaptive arm of the immune system is also extremely important. This system responds to invading microbes using a complex interaction of cells and soluble factors such as antibodies and chemical messengers. One part of this scheme involves the recognition of an invader, exposure of certain cells (antigen-presenting cells and lymphocytes) to the invader, and eventual production of proteins called antibodies that can tie up and help destroy the specific microbe that initiated its production. The B lymphocyte, produced in the cloacal bursa of the chicken, is a very important immune cell because it produces antibodies and "remembers" the invader in case it infects again.

The T lymphocyte, produced in the thymus, is key to the complex cellular immune response. The bursa and thymus are extremely important in the young chick as "nurseries" for the lymphoid cells that eventually leave in the blood and lymph to populate various tissues of the bird. Lymphoid cells are found in many other locations of the body including the spleen, Harderian gland, and in scattered groups throughout the respiratory and gastrointestinal tracts. The bone marrow manufactures many white blood cells including those that become moocytes, macrophages, and heterophils — all of which are important cells in inflammation and fighting infection. Normal function of these organs is critical to the maintenance of host defense throughout the life of the chicken.

Any disease can be considered to be somewhat immunosuppressive. If immune cells and soluble factors are already involved in fighting infection, the body has less reserves left to effectively respond to other insults. Because of this, it is generally not advisable to vaccinate clinically diseased birds. These birds produce less antibody and less cellular immunity than healthy birds would given the same vaccination. Although many diseases, toxins, and stressors can affect the immune system adversely, there are certain specific infectious diseases that are direct causes of acquired immune dysfunction in broilers today. They are infectious bursal disease, chicken infectious anemia, Marek's disease, and avian leukosis/sarcoma. To follow are brief descriptions of each of these conditions.

Infectious bursal disease (IBD) is caused by a birnavirus named for its nucleic acid structure of double stranded (bi) ribonucleic acid (RNA). There are classical and variant antigonic types and a range of pathotypes of this virus. In other words, there are variations in key parts of its structure as well as in type and severity of disease produced. The virus is transmitted horizontally, generally by fecal-oral route. The virus causes direct destruction of B lymphocytes in the cloacal bursa. Variant types may also affect the thymic population of T lymphocytes. Impaired ability to produce humoral immunity (antibody) results. The younger a susceptible bird is when infected with IBD virus, the more permanent damage to immune function will result. It is particularly important to protect chickens during the first 3 to 4 weeks of age against IBD. Detection of IBD is based on gross and microscopic examination of the bursa, determination of bursa weight to body weight ratios, and serologic evidence of exposure. It is important to keep in mind that bursal and thymic atrophy is not always the result of IBD, and other causes of lymphoid depletion must be investigated and ruled out. Control of IBD in broilers is mainly achieved by rigorous vaccination of breeder parents, often using live vaccine primes during grow and killed vaccines before lay. Vaccines that contain variant strains can be used as appropriate to field virus challenge in the region. Ideally, the progeny from well-vaccinated breeders will have uniformly high maternal antibody titers when hatched to protect them during the first few weeks of life. Depending on maternal antibody levels and on local challenge, broilers may also be vaccinated with live IBD vaccines one or more times. The goal is to induce an active immune response in subpopulations of chicks as their passively acquired maternal antibody titers wane to a level at which the vaccine can break through. When using vaccines in broilers, care must be taken to tailor low, intermediate, and high virulence vaccine strains to age of broiler and degree and type of field challenge. Also important in control of IBD on problem farms is thorough cleaning and disinfection of the house and equipment, and increased down time between placements.

Chicken infectious anemia (CIA) is caused by a circovirus, a small virus containing circular single stranded DNA. Transmission is both horizontal and vertical, with vertical being the most important to development and dissemination of clinical disease in broilers. There is profound suppression of the cellular immune system because of T cell destruction in the thymus. Destruction of red blood cell and possibly white blood cell precursors in the bone marrow also occurs. Some degree of bursal atrophy is usually present. Some birds die from severe anemia, but many more succumb to secondary infections, often bacterial in nature.

Progeny diseases usually results from non-immune breeder flocks becoming infected with CIA virus during lay. Vertically infected chicks can be produced for approximately 3 to 4 weeks after parent flock exposure. These chicks then shed virus horizontally to flock mates that most often are from the same breeder flock and have no maternal antibody to CIA.

The horizontally infected chicks also develop clinical CIA. Once the breeder flock mounts an antibody response and clears the virus, no more vertically infected chicks are produced, and chicks receive protective maternal antibody that prevents productive horizontal infections at the crucial early ages. Horizontal transmission at a later age generally does not result in disease.

It has been documented that concurrent infection with IBD, MD, or reovirus can exacerbate the clinical effects of CIA. Detection of CIA in broilers is by gross and histologic examination of the birds, test for anemia, and detection of virus. In breeders CIA exposure is detected by serology (testing blood for antibodies to CIA virus). Control of CIA is at the breeder level. Breeder pullets must be monitored for seroconversion to CIA before they begin production. In the past, "natural" field exposure, in some cases aided by transfer of used litter from known positive flocks, was relied upon to expose breeder pullets. This method was unsatisfactory and unreliable in many ways. Commercial vaccine has become available for use within the last 2 years, which has greatly enhanced reliable immunity to the disease.

Marek's Disease (MD) is caused by a herpesvirus that is ubiquitous in all chicken-raising areas. There are strain differences in virulence among MD viruses, and the trend is toward more virulent viruses in recent years. Transmission is horizontal, usually by inhalation of virus particles in the environment. MD virus causes two phases of immuno suppression — an early cytolytic infection in which both B and T lymphocytes are destroyed and a later neoplastic transformation of T lymphocytes. In this delayed phase, tumors form from immature T lymphocytes which can no longer perform immune function tasks. Bursal and thymic atrophy occur. Both cellular and humoral immunity are affected by Marek's Disease.

Detection of MD is by gross and histologic exam findings of lymphomas in various organs, including typical lesions in brain, nerve and skin from affected birds, and condemned carcasses. Clinical MD is more frequent in broilers grown to older ages. Control of MD is primarily achieved through hatchery vaccination administered by either subcutaneous injection of day old chicks or in ovo injection of embryonated eggs at transfer. Various combinations of serotypes 3, 2 and 1 vaccines are used depending on field challenge.

Proper vaccination generally results in good protection from development of clinical MD, but does not prevent infection by field MD viruses. Other management facets of control include frequent complete litter removal and cleaning and disinfection of the house, dust control, and increased down time. Single age (all in - all out) rearing is important for control of disease in general, but is particularly crucial for MD control. In some instances when field challenge is considered very high, chicks may be held an extra day at the hatchery before being moved to the farm to delay exposure.

Avian leukosis/sarcome (ALS) complex disease has been a problem for many years in various types of chickens throughout the world. These related neoplastic diseases are caused by a group of retroviruses within which several subgroups of viruses have been identified. The virus has the ability to insert itself into the genome of the chicken, and can be passed vertically to progeny. Horizontal transmission of most of the subgroup viruses also occurs in very young chicks reared together, although in general these viruses do not transmit very efficiently this way when compared to most other chicken viruses.

In our country, lymphoid leukosis, caused by ALS subgroup A or B viruses, has been a problem for many years, particularly in certain single comb white leghorn strains. Lymphoid leukosis is characterized by the development of lymphoid cell tumors of the B cell line. In this decade, ALS subgroup J virus, often referred to as "J virus," has become endemic in many strains of heavy meat type chickens. It has essentially become an industry-wide problem in broiler breeders.

J virus is known to cause immunosuppression and tumor formation in these birds. In the most typical manifestation of the disease, the virus affects the bone marrow, resulting in neoplastic transformation of the myeloid cell line. Precursors of the heterophil, an important white blood cell involved in fighting infection, divide uncontrollably and form tumors. Often myeloid tumors arise from flat bones such as the sternum, skull or ribs. However, the virus may affect other types of cells and cause different tumor types including various sarcomas and carcinomas.

The effects on breeders are well documented. There is also good evidence for decreased performance in broilers from known infected breeder flocks, although broilers are typically too young to develop grossly detectable tumors. However significant depression of immune function is thought to occur concurrent with early infection with ALS virus.

J virus infection is detected in breeders by gross and histologic exam findings of myeloid or related tumors. Methods of virus detection have also been developed. Serologic tests are available, but interpretation of results is complicated by the fact that vertically or early horizontally infected chicks do not recognize the virus as "foreign" and do not mount an antibody response to it.

There is no easily applicable test for J virus in broilers, but it can be assumed that any progeny from a known infected breeder flock might be infected and capable of transmitting virus to other young chicks raised in the same group.

Ultimate long-term control of ALS is by eradication at the primary breeder level. It is necessary to detect and eliminate infected birds within all levels of genetic lines. Eradication has been hampered by lack of knowledge about the virus, cumbersome detection methods, and the fact that J virus appears to be much more efficient at horizontal transmission than some other ALS viruses (such as lymphoid leukosis virus) that the chicken industry has dealt with previously. Major inroads have been made in the last few years in understanding the virus and what needs to be done to eliminate it.

While the above infectious diseases are not the only causes of immune dysfunction in broilers, they should be considered when immunosuppression is suspected.

How do you detect possible immunosuppression in a flock? It is usually the secondary effects of poor immune responses that are noticed. They include multiple, sometimes non-specific problems that hadn't been present in previous flocks under similar management. Or the same problems are present, but they are more widespread, more severe, longer lasting, or unresponsive to treatments or interventions that had previously been effective. Increased morbidity and mortality, both from primary conditions (e.g., coccidiosis, infectious bronchitis, etc.) as well as from secondary infections (colibacillosis, staphylococcosis, gangrenous dermatitis, inclusion body hepatitis, cryplosporidiosis, etc.), occurs. Increased feed conversion ratios decreased uniformity and increased condemnations often result. Poor responses to vaccinations including excessive or rolling reactions to the live infectious bronchitis and Newcastle Disease vaccines, as well as low or uneven antibody responses to vaccines are seen. Birds may respond initially to medications but relapse soon after the treatment is stopped.

Another important effect of widespread immunosuppression that may not be immediately apparent but which may cause long-term problems in poultry health is this: increased rates and duration of infection create increased opportunity for the emergence of new pathogens or new strains of existing pathogens. For example, variant infectious bronchitis virus strains may emerge and spread faster. Similarly, other viruses known to mutate unpredictably such as avian influenca may gain a foothold and become harder to control.

Opportunistic bacteria can become more of a problem and antibiotic resistant bacteria may evolve more quickly. The bacterium Ornithobacterium Rhinotracheale, was unknown 10 years ago. But recently it has been identifed as a common cause of air sacculitis in broilers in some areas of the country. One might speculate that it is not really a "new" bacteria, but that it has become established because of decreased broiler immunity to opportunistic respiratory infections.

Once immunosuppression is detected in a flock, how do you handle the flock to minimize disease problems? Enhanced biosecurity and "TLC" (tender loving care) are necessary in this situation. Make sure all biosecurity measures are taken to create barriers to movement of possible pathogens into (or out of) the flock. Management procedures to optimize the immediate environment (temperature, ventilation, density, litter quality, feed and water quality and availability, and general cleanliness), should be carried out stringently. If possible, vaccinate less and use the mildest vaccines available.

If antibiotic therapy must be instituted, choose a bactericidal product over a bacteristatic one, and be sure to use the correct dosage and duration of treatment. If a specific immunosuppressive disease has been diagnosed, institute the respective control measures, outlined above so that it is less likely to occur in the next flock.

In summary, it is extremely important to protect the broiler's immune system so it can do its job — defend the chicken from disease-causing organisms. Identifying causes of acquired immune dysfunction such as IBD, CIA, MD and ALS are key to controlling them in your flock. In troubleshooting broiler health and performance problems, especially those that present a "mixed bag" of conditions not previously experienced, always check for underlying causes of immune dysfunction.

THAT MUCH-MALIGNED MIDDLEMAN

John D. Rutherford Jr.
Farm Management Agent
Lebanon, Berks, and Dauphin Counties

There was a time when farmland was wide open space, inhabited only by farm families and the occasional small town. More of the production from area farms fed the nearby population. People bought basic ingredients such as milk, meat, flour, and vegetables directly from local farmers or from the stores which bought from the farmers. The linkage between field to table was relatively direct, short, and involved few intermediaries.

Contrast the historical setting to the current food system. Except for U-picks and other roadside stands, the correlation between local production and local consumption is relatively small.

Consumer preferences are the primary reason. Fresh fruit and vegetables in the winter months, tropical fruits, and foods that require only a minimum of in-home preparation are products that don't come directly from Lebanon farms. When foods have to be transported from great distances, stored for long periods of time, or processed in some way, the connection to the farmer gets weakened.

Each person, company, or process associated with a food product before the food is purchased by a consumer is lumped into the category of "Middle Man." (The term is very old and perhaps in need of updating to the more politically correct "Middle Person.") Middlemen are particularly mistrusted by the farming population because of the difference between the price a farmer receives and the price charged in a store. Let's look at how much of a difference there is between farm and retail prices, and discuss some reasons that these differences exist.

We will start with an example from the dairy case. Milk is sold off the farm in quantities of 100 pounds, called hundredweight. For each hundredweight produced in July, farmers are being paid about $15. A gallon of milk weighs 8.6 pounds, so there are 11.6 gallons of milk in every hundredweight of milk sold from the farm. Dividing the hundredweight price by 11.6 means that the farmer receives $1.29 out of the price paid in the store. If milk sells in the store for $2.25, the farmer's share comes to 57 percent of the price a consumer pays.

The example is a very simplified version of the calculation of the farm-retail price spread. For one, not all milk that leaves the farm is of the same quality. Typically a dairy farm is paid more for milk with a higher butterfat content. There are other quality measure tests given to milk that equate to how much cheese it will yield. Farms that sell higher quality milk receive slightly higher prices. Another difference is that not all milk goes into gallons. Some becomes half-gallons, some pints, some is flavored, and some becomes cheeses, butter, ice cream, and other products.

Showing the public where the food money goes is a project of the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA). The USDA tracks the amount and price of milk and other farm produce that are put to different uses, along with the price charged for these products when they are purchased by consumers. This data is reported in the Farm-Retail Price Spread charts that published quarterly. See the table included in this article. The numbers listed after each food category indicate the percentage that goes back to the farmer of each dollar you spend in the store.

Different conclusions stem from this data, depending on the group to which you belong. If you are a farmer, you feel the retailer and middlemen are getting too much of the price of food. If you are a middleman or retailer, you don't understand why farmers can't produce more cheaply or why consumers won't pay more. If you are a consumer, you don't understand why farmers, middlemen and retailers can't lower their prices. This is why we have an economic system of (relatively) free markets.

Whoever does any of the functions necessary to put food on the table more cheaply, or better said, more efficiently, they will reap the rewards. Farmers need to realize that the spread between farm and retail prices covers transportation, processing and labor, safety, advertising, product development, market research, and the cost of unsold product. If the middleman is profiting so greatly, then farmers should look into possibilities for processing on their own. If middlemen want to increase profits, they need to look into integrating with production facilities. Indeed, much of the poultry industry has already done this and pork production is moving in this direction. If consumers are concerned about the price of food, they need to learn to pepare foods from basic ingredients, buy directly from farmers, or start raising items on their own.

The Farm-Retail Price Spread is presented by the USDA in the publication "Agricultural Outlook." Copies of the latest tables can be obtained by contacting your county cooperative extension office. We also have information on obtaining "Agricultural Outlook" or you can contact the USDA directly.

Grain Producers Announce Scholarships

EDGEWATER, Md. — The Maryland Grain Producers Utilization Board has allocated $5,000 of grain checkoff funds to support the second annual scholarship program.

The program will be administered by the Maryland Grain Producers Association, which will be awarding two deserving students with scholarships in the amount of $2,500 each ($1,250 for each semester) enrolled in a Maryland or an out-of-state institution.

The purpose of the scholarship is to provide financial support to students interested in pursuing an agriculturally related career. Given the dynamic changes in agriculture today, the advances in biotechnology, global positioning systems, environmental protection, crop and livestock production, Maryland's grain farmers believe it is very important to encourage students to consider careers in agriculture by enhancing their educational development through the use of scholarships.

"Agriculture is undoubtedly not the same as it was with all of the technology available today," said Breck Debnam, president of the Maryland Grain Producers Utilization Board. "The agricultural community needs a strong educational foundation if we are going to take a second look at a career in agriculture."

The scholarships will be awarded to full time students attending a 4-year institution or students enrolled in a 2-year agricultural program. The selections will be based on agricultural background, family farm involvement, financial need, grade point average, agriculture-related studies, career goals, and extra-curricular activities.

For an application, contact the Maryland Grain Producers Association, 53 Slama Road, Edgewater, MD 21037-1423. Applications are due by Mary 1.

Mulch Unit Has Mount Option

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — Earth & Turf Company introduces a front mount option for the MulchCat™ that easily attaches to the John Deere 900 and 1100 series mowers. The mulch unit's cubic yard capacity is designed to minimize the time and effort of distributing mulching materials on ornamental landscape beds. The high-torque, 12-volt electric motor has an on/off switch, which allows the operator to regulate the mulch flow from the seat of the tractor. Two agitators loosen the materials as the mulch is discharged from the unit. Mulch is windrowed inside the edge of the bed.

Tire Beads Have Variety Of Uses

UPPERCO, Md. — Whole tires can turn into a sloppy mess, especially when used to hold down bunker silo covers. But a dairy has found a way to use "tire beads" — a circle cut out of the inside of tractor-trailer tires about four inches wide — that are easier to handle and transport and don't retain water.

Wayne L. Armacost of Hickory Hill Dairy in Upperco, Md., has come up with a way to obtain tires from a recycler in Baltimore and cut them in a way to provide less bulk but equal cover retention, are easier to handle and transport than full-size tires, provide less labor and time to cover bunk, and can easily be stacked for storage. There are other uses, including road bed and road bank stabilization.

Field Cultivators Feature High-Residue Clearance

ATLANTA, Ga. — The new FC3600 field cultivator from Glencoe turns high residue fields into high-quality seedbeds with only one pass through the field.

Glencoe's FC3600 allows producers to mix, aerate, and level your soil and thoroughly incorporate herbicides and fertilizers to optimize planting conditions even in high residue.

Now in larger working widths, the FC3600 is available in widths of 42 feet, 49 feet, 57 feet, and 62 feet. With outstanding features from hitch to harrow, the FC3600 provides the added strength and durability with a heavy-duty, self-leveling frame and hitch. The new edge-formed cultivator shank design is narrower than conventional shanks to reduce soil resistance and reduce horsepower. Heavy-duty, 27 inch long "live leaf" shanks maintain 165 pounds of point pressure, have a 9-1/2" trip height, and provide excellent soil penetration even in tough soil conditions.

Working depth is quickly, easily and precisely adjusted manually or hydraulically with depth control and infinite depth adjustments conveniently located on the front of each section. This adjustment can be automated by installing the optional DCS3000 depth control system. Additional options include 5-bar flexible spike tooth harrow as well as 3-bar and 5-bar coil tine harrows.

Snider's Elevator To Host Horse Seminar

LEMASTERS (Franklin Co.) — On Saturday, March 6, Snider's Elevator Inc. will hold its eighth annual Horse Seminar at the Lemasters Community Center.

Last year more than 175 people attended the event which includes speakers, refreshments, door prizes and horse exhibitions.

Snider's Elevator, a feed manufacturer and grain storage facility, has announced speakers for the horse seminar. Dr. Colleen Wilson, who has a doctorate in animal sciences research in equine physiology and nutrition, Oregon State University, has served as the associate dean of equine studies at a private college. Also she taught equine science and management courses for eight years. At a major feed company, Wilson served as a sales training specialist. A lifelong equestrian, Wilson has participated in jumping, eventing, dressage, and plays polo. She has raised and trained sport horses for many years. Also she works for Farnam Companies, Inc. New Product Development for horse, pet and other livestock and veterinary products.

Wilson will be discussing the "Aging Equine – The Special Needs Of the Senior Horse" and "Joint Supplements – Will My Horse Need Them?" Following Wilson's discussion, there will be refreshments.

The next speaker, Heather Heider, Southern States equine feed and technical representative, will discuss "Feeding Your Horse Now For His Future Health." Heider has been with Southern States for five years.

Heider, who has a bachelor's degree from Virginia Tech, held several state championships for showing draft horses and mules on the east coast. She is involved in showing hunters on the A circuit, as well as foxhunting, and training young horses.

There will be a demonstration of carriage horses, 10:30 a.m. before the seminar, weather permitting. The speakers will begin at 11:30 a.m. Admission is free, and reservations deadline is March 2. Call (717) 328-2107 or 1-800-C-Snider or stop by Snider's Elevator, Inc. office to register.

President Puts Customers First

GREENSBORO, N.C. — Adding value is what it's all about for Novartis Crop Protection's new U.S. President, Heinrich (Heiri) Gugger.

Since arriving at the company's Greensboro, N.C., headquarters Aug. 1, Gugger has been in nearly perpetual motion. He's spent the time seeking input from and sharing his vision with growers, commodity organization leaders, agrichemical dealers, the Novartis sales force, manufacturing employees, and other colleagues.

All of this activity has been aimed at making sure the company is on target to meet the changing needs of its customers.

"My main goal is to continue Novartis' rich history of being the most successful crop protection company in the North American market. To do that, we must always keep the grower's needs in mind. Today's grower wants solutions that will add value to the crop, and we will deliver," Gugger said.

That's why our customers figure most prominently in our new vision statement: 'Your Crop . . . Our Passion'."

Heinrich (Heiri) Gugger

Anticipating and meeting customer nees requires knowing exactly who the customer is. Gugger defines the customer as the end user of Novartis Crop Protection's products: the grower. Growers want the highest return on input investments. However, he points out, success with growers depends on excellent relationships with wholesalers, distributors, and retail dealers. They need business volume and good profit margins. Both growers and distribution partners can meet their needs with a crop solutions approach. The key is performance on all levels, not just by Novartis, but by all of its trade partners.

Gugger plans to build total crop solutions on the foundation of Novartis' existing strengths:

"First market research confirms we have the best customer service in the business. Our customers say we address their needs and follow up to solve their problems," Gugger said.

"Second, we have the broadest and best product line, ranging from herbicides, fungicides and insecticides to seed treatment. That is growing to include new products that are in the pipeline for introduction starting in 1999 and extending into the new millennium.

"And third, we have an excellent record of innovation. We are in the best position in the industry to combine traditional chemistry with biotechnology. Unlike some of our competitors, Novartis has both a strong seed and a strong crop protection capability," he said.

Agricultural Workshop A Success

TRANQUILITY, N.J. — Winnie Straub, district manager of the Sussex County Soil Conservation District and Dan Jones, Natural Resources Conservation Service district conservationist, kicked off a recent conservation workshop to a crowd of more than 65 people.

The workshop was sponsored by the soil conservation districts of Sussex, Warren, and Morris counties and was geared to inform farmers and landowners about evaluating their conservation needs, reviewing "On Farm Strategies to Protect Water Quality" (the Best Management Practice manual), and to give an overview of agricultural conservation practices recommended by state and federal agencies.

There's an estimated 1,200 applicants after the $2.25 million available from this Environmental Quality Incentives Program.

Speakers presenting at this workshop included: Bob Morgan from the Farm Service Agency, Bill Tietjen and Bob Mickel from the Rutgers Cooperative Extension Service, Clifford R. Lundin represented both the board supervisor of Sussex County and the New Jersey Association of Conservation Districts, Helen Heinrich from the Farm Bureau, Dan Jones from the Natural Resource Conservation Service District, and Jim Sadley from the State Soil Conservation Committee.

SPECIALIZING IN PRE-ENGINEERED STEEL BUILDINGS SINCE 1990

Founded in 1990 and incorporated in 1992, A S HOOVER, INC has grown rapidly for good reasons The corporation has been recognized in two recent issues of a national industry news magazine

WHY A.S. HOOVER, INC. FOR STEEL BUILDINGS?

A. SAFETY! With emphasis on strength, NO BUILDING FROM A.S. HOOVER HAS NEVER COLLAPSED!

B. QUALITY AND DESIGN. In addition to commercial, agricultural, and industrial applications including cranes, buildings from HOOVER have met the strict criteria of the National, State, and Township Governments, the School District, and the Philadelphia Airport

C. PRICE! With the most of buildings coming from the lower cost South, and hauled on backhaul, plus a high volume combined with low handling overhead, HOOVER is a leader in cost per ton of steel on the jobsite

D. RELIABILITY! CECO Building Systems, originally Mitchell Buildings is one of the oldest and largest metal building firms The record of Pennsylvania German builders speaks for itself

In short, A S Hoover, Inc brings to the customer via the smaller Plain people contractors, the benefits of a larger organization while maintaining the frugality for which they are noted With concentration on efficiency and workmanship, alcohol, profanity, and blaring radios are not permitted on the job

In addition to the volume with CECO, Dealerships are also held with KIRBY (spans to 40' on 12" purlins) and CORLE (galvanized girt and purlin systems) giving unsurpassed coverage of all applications

This natural, mechanically extruded and expelled soybean product is experiencing great acceptance with local dairymen. A course golden colored meal with a 6% fat content, Golden Pro 46 XP is extremely palatable. Golden Pro 46 XP is a natural way to bring the value of high by-pass protein into diets that require a lower fat level.

GOLDEN MEAL 40
An 18 percent fat content along with a 40 percent crude protein makes this mechanically extruded meal product a valuable component in a variety of rations. Full fat content gives you a high level of digestible energy, while high temperature extruding ruptures the oil cells for better nutritional absorbtions.

CRUDE SOYBEAN OIL

Incredible buy and a spring settlement is in order. This farm can be your ASAP. This dairy is under priced and has been reduced from the original price by $200K and nothing has been reserved. The assessment is more than the present sale price and it is in "Clean & Green" so taxes are reasonable. I could say a lot more but you must see this great location and all the fine facilities.
